

Bits of Birmingham

Apparently everybody is glad that the election is over. One good thing about it was that it tended to crowd the war out of the daily newspapers. Editors must have headlines, so now you will note that the war is again very, very pressing.

Grounds of the post office look fine with the shrubbery that Ralph Corryell has been planting there. At first, we feared how the back door would look from Maple avenue where many visitors pass by; but we note that the rear entrance of the building is very attractive, as well as the front.

If you are an alien and have not yet registered, Postmaster Joe Byrne asks that you PLEASE register now on Tuesdays and Fridays. Final date is Dec. 26, and the Christmas rush at the post office will have the men running ragged, even without the alien registration job.

Miss Stoddard, police department clerk, is not very encouraging to the boys who strive to live to look up their draft numbers. (The names, nearly 3,000 of them, are all on the sheets of paper tacked to the bulletin board.)

"Plew!" one had said Monday as he looked at the jumble. "How long do you think it will take me to find my name?"

"I don't know," Miss Stoddard laughed. "One man hunted from 5 to 7:30 the other night and still couldn't find his name, until another man found it for him. Some times it takes an hour. Maybe, if you're lucky, you'll find it right away."

Miss Stoddard was right, of course, in not painting a too rosy picture for the boys. The names are listed just in the order the original cards were shuffled and numbered.

A boy six years old living on Linden road, and another, 10, living on Aspen, were apprehended the other day after they had dumped seven sacks of cement on a fresh concrete floor in the basement of a new house on Aspen. They also broke windows and cleaned themselves in other ways. However, their parents have agreed to pay.

A. G. Rupp, 789 Shirley drive, has reported the theft of his house numbers affixed to a little sign, on his lawn.

If you like amateur theatricals, go over to Barnum School tonight and see "Tom Sawyer." Also High School students are staging a variety show tonight and Friday evening, and it promises to be very interesting entertainment. We have some very talented youngsters in Birmingham.

Two small boys, one six and the other four, were introduced into the gasoline station at Woodward and George, Sunday, and asked for change for two five-dollar bills. Attendants, quite sure the boys hadn't earned the money, called police who found that the father of one boy found himself short $10. Not a very extensive spree!

Police were called Sunday morning to Dorchester, where it had been reported that a hunter was in the fields. It was Paul B. Bell, 1182 Dorchester, and he assured the editors that he had not been shooting inside the city limits. He had just shot a pheasant outside the city limits and was looking for it, he told them.

Chissus Construction Co. of Birmingham has won the contract for building an addition to West boulevard county office building in Pontiac. Original price was $60,000, but will probably run less, for several parts of the structure have been taken from the plans. Bob Chissus informed this Wanderer that he is very busy, and that prices of materials are jumping.

Members of the Exchange Club enjoyed an unusual joint Tuesday after the regular noon luncheon. Members went out to the new disposal plant which many had never seen, and the waste engineer explained to them by City Manager Egbert and Stanley Mogelnicki, the officers that he had not been most interesting to this Wanderer was the fact that when sludge is put into big tanks and bacteria "digest" the material, methane gas is given off. This gas, richer than manufactured gas, is piped to an engine where it is used in running a heavy pump. The gas can also be burned to heat the building, when there is enough of it.

At the end of the process, the water residue, crystal clear and containing neither fertilizer nor other material, is pumped into the river, while the solid residue is available for use as fertilizer. There was the absence of any offensive odor.

Any Birmingham people who are interested are invited to make such an inspection. The plant is located on Cranbrook road, which can be reached by driving west on Lincoln, and turning south.

A complaint has been received by police concerning bicycle with motor attached which is said to have been used in the wrong side of Chesterfield avenue.

Mrs. Rufus Jones, 1260 Brick-drum, came home late last Friday night and found her youngest one, apparently a child, had entered the house through a rear door, taken a hatbox and back pack from the basement and then married a case of drawers.

Ted Johnston, the youthful public address system and dance record broadcaster, has suffered loss of a $27.60 electric meter device, taken from the High School, Halloween night.

Many do not know it, but The Eccentric has two trunk lines to Detroit. People wishing to phone us from Detroit are welcome to use them—the number is Elmhurst 6644.

We got another letter from "Just a Mother," who last week wrote The Eccentric a letter asking us to answer her questions about the election. We wrote that if she revealed her identity to us, we should have taken time last Thursday or Friday to answer her inquiries, as the fore part of the week is too rushed to permit political ramination by a news staff. We would not of course have revealed her name to anyone had she so requested. However, "Just a Mother" chooses to remain anonymous, so that's that. We hope her candidate won!

Carl Sterling, of Detroit, has been granted a taxi driver's license by the City Commission. He will drive for Star.

Alice Painter, student at Michigan State, is having as her guest this week-end, Jane Pointer. The Painters and Pointers have been friends for years.

Donald Webb, eight years old, of 345 Kimberly, was bitten Monday by a dog owned by York Gidley, 340 Kimberly, according to a police report.

INS Add hits of Bham — RVT Richard Dewey, 219 North Woodward, who has been very active in affairs of the American Legion here, has been appointed community service chairman for the 17th Congressional district, which covers 19 posts in Oakland County.

Shortly after midnight on Halloween evening, the Troy Township fire department was called to a fire on the Utley farm, on the west side of Monnier, just south of Wattle road. Seven hay stacks were on fire and burned to the ground, entailing a loss of about 100 tons of hay. Despite the late hour a great number of cars from different directions arrived at the scene. The flames reached a great height and the blaze was a magnificent spectacle. However, the owner is offering a reward for apprehension of the culprit.
