

From the Women's Angle

By NELLIE HURLEY MINIFIE
 The egg throwing occurrence that last week landed nearby Pontiac on the front pages of every newspaper from Maine to California, was more than just a violation of everything for which the United States stands. True enough it contradicted the deepest rooted principles of our forebears, those men who founded this nation for the people and of these same people. It violated the hopes, the very ideals upon which our government was founded.

But more than this the episode seems to stand as a symbol of what may come all too soon if you, the parents of the coming generation, do not firmly instill into your children tolerance and a willingness to listen to both sides of a question. Tolerance, in our opinion, is the greatest quality of man. It is necessary for the preservation of man and the dreams and ideals which are his birthright. Without tolerance civilization will perish.

Miss Minifie
 Intolerance has tossed Europe into a fiery maelstrom that has brought death and destruction to millions. Intolerance is the basis of Europe's major governments today. That is what United States is headed for if we go along the road upon which we are headed. Nonsense, you may say, it is not that big. But it is. I know for I have heard youngsters, barely old enough to toddle, speak with voices filled with hate of Wilkie or of Roosevelt.

And where do they learn this? Not at school you are sure. This has come from the home. These tiny tots, far too young to know why Roosevelt is a great man or why Wilkie should be our next president, are in their own way only mimicking what they have heard at their own fireside.

That is why I say to you, teach your child tolerance. Teach him that every man has qualities of greatness. Teach him and you will build a nation that can never be torn down. Teach him this and you will build more than you will ever know.

By KATHERINE W. GEORGE
 There is more than a grain of truth in the old and inelegant saying, "Them that has gets." And this is the time of year when one realizes it afresh, for it is not that heroes of the baseball diamond, after a successful season, are showered with watches, radios, suits of clothes and even automobiles by ardent fans.

Now I have no objection to these sterling athletes receiving gifts and certainly recognition of fine play and worthy effort is their due. But when it comes to giving such things as motor cars to professional athletes who are paid in the thousands for their services and who, consequently, can well afford to buy these things for themselves, I do object.

How much nicer it would be if the titans of wealth and industry, when they feel the urge to give away some of their surplus wares, would pick out some deserving person or persons who cannot afford to purchase them, at the recipients. The head of a large family, for instance, who needs a car for his work or a shut-in whose dreary hours would be brightened by a radio. Such a gift would be an act to bring rewards indeed to the donor in the knowledge of a good deed done, though no publicity would accrue to him. As for the benefits of publicly attending exorbitant presents to famous persons high in the economic scale, I doubt it is of benefit, but rather the reverse.

Yet, I have never heard of anyone giving away anything of value to deserving but poor folk with no acclaim to the limit. It is much more fun, I guess, to make gifts to professional baseball players, who are paid salaries of from $10,000 to $30,000 annually, or to visiting royalty, who are kept in style and luxury by their respective subjects. Everyone likes to hobnob with fame and that's one way of doing it.
