For your 1942 telephone call

At some future time . . . let us say some morning in 1942 . . . you will want to make a telephone call. You still will want a quick, clear connection. The necessary equipment . . . switchboards, cables, wires, vacuum tube repeaters, test boards, and so on . . . is so complex that it simply cannot be assembled overnight. That's why we are working on your 1942 call now! We must develop and build for it in advance. Long experience has taught us that while serving the present, we also must be preparing constantly for the still greater demands of the lature,
