

School Dance Takes on Patriotic Aspect

Campaign Buttons To Be Distributed To Pupils at Door

The high school set is going in for politics this presidential year. And more than that, they are mixing it with their dances.

At least that is the news from Rosalind Handall, who is acting as general chairman of this first dance of the year.

The affair is under the sponsorship of the Student Congress of Baldwin High School and is being known officially as a Mixer Dance.

Using patriotism as the theme, Wilkie and Roosevelt lapel buttons will be distributed at the door.

It is expected that the majority of the high school's 800 students will attend this dance.

Assisting the general chairman are Duska Peterson and Dick Gilbert.

Music will be provided by a Rochester orchestra.

Patricia Ead Speaks Vows At Home Rites

Norah Patricia Ead, daughter of the late Harold O. Ead of Lincoln avenue, became the bride of Charles Franklin Zeigler, of Ellwood City, Pa., Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock at her mother's home.

The Rev. Gordon Philips, of Dearborn, read the ceremony in the living room where a profusion of pastel flowers was used.

For her wedding the bride wore a street length deep brown crepe with rhinestone clips at the high neckline. She wore a tiny wreath of white flowers in her hair and carried Johanna Hill roses.

Her bridesmaid was her sister, Mrs. H. D. Harris, Jr., of Flint, who wore an afternoon dress of solid blue crepe and corsage of pink rosebuds. Robert B. Jones, of Ellwood City, was Mr. Zeigler's best man.

Mrs. Ead wore a navy blue dress and Mrs. Zeigler's gown was of dark green wool crepe. Both wore corsages of sweetheart roses.

Following a reception the couple left for a Northern Michigan trip. On their return they will live on Bloomfield court.

Hortense McGavran Is Wed Charles Gilbert's Fiancee on Visit From Tulsa, Okla.

Westminster Presbyterian Chapel in Detroit was banked with palms and pedestal baskets of white gladioli for the candlelight double ring service at 8:30 Saturday evening that joined Hortense Jane McGavran, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Clark McGavran, of Sylvester court, and Robert Bruce McKenzie, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Edward McKenzie, of North Woodward avenue.

For her wedding the bride was lovely in the ivory satin empire gown—the dress worn by her mother who was married in 1909.

The gown was fashioned with a square neckline and tightly fitted three-quarter length marquisette sleeves. The skirt was extremely full and there was a slight train.

Her veil was finger tip length and fashioned from illusion and was fastened to a Juliet cap that was bandied in ivory satin. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses, baby's breath, centered with gardenias.

Mrs. Edward Linsell, her sister's matron of honor, chose a frock of velveteen in the new coralberry shade made with a square neck line scalloped at the edges. Tiny buttons down the bodice and short puffed sleeves accentuated the attractiveness of the frock. Her flowers were pale blue asters and chrysanthemums.

Mrs. Lawrence G. Kelly, of Toledo, and Margaret Grierson, bridesmaids, wore gowns identical with that of Mrs. Linsell. The bridesmaids' flowers were purple asters.

Bruce R. Later was Mr. McKenzie's best man, and usher were Dr. Harry G. McGavran, of Chicago, brother of the bride, and Dean H. Loth, of Royal Oak.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. McGavran chose a floor length frock of romance blue worn under a long sleeved jacket. Her flowers were lilacs. Mrs. McKenzie wore black velvet with a corsage of gardenias.

For the reception at the bride's home which followed the wedding, the fireplace of the living room was banked by green in front of which were placed bouquets of roses. A white French cloth covered the bride's table on which was placed the tiered wedding cake and crystal candelabra.

For her Eastern trip Mrs. McKenzie chose a sheer wool frock in hunters green over which was worn a beige coat with a large fur collar. Her hat and accessories were brown.

On their return from two weeks in New England and Cape Cod, the couple will live at 111 Gardena avenue, Royal Oak.
