Knocking on Wood

with John H. HARWOOD

IF AMERICA CAN AVOID WAR .

IF THE war were to stop tomortow, I believe America I would willingly enter in some out of an international union for collective security, to mevent in the future the rise of a new crop of dictator-destroyers. On the other hand, if America becomes an active, shooting, all-out parters of Britain, sending expeditionary forces, to all parts of the globe, I suspect that the post-war reaction would be exactly the same as in 1919.

The War and Its Aftermath their mole of living, Given a certain economic and political environment, we can foretell the tendency of social movements, the details or even the general outlines are in the field of speculation, perhaps clairvoy-amer.

forciell the tembercy of social movements; the details or even the general outlines are in the field of speculation, perhaps clairsoyance.

For example, a Hitlerized Europe could hardly have been predicted a year before, he seem in the appearance of the Cerman hardon is force leading to some sort of dictatorship.

Again, the most sanguine socialist in America, and the social of the German hation is force leading to some sort of dictatorship the social separation would be residually and their social social legislation would be the championed within a few years by an aristocratic landowner; and not even Roosevelt knew in 1933 that the would be president of a nation demanding government largesse.

Social thanges come about gradually? imperceptibly. Things happen, and people find adjustment in the new conditions. The new conditions may be unsattlactory, and in the conditions of the second of the social social Right now we are gazing into the crystal ball of the future. We find in it mames: Hitler, Hoosevelt, Chirchill. Yet what these persons do are do not do is not of their own planning. They find themselves in a milieu which was prepared for them by economic, social and political developments that originated, perhaps, wears before they were horn. And the kind of life that will prevail decades hence as in part the result of what is happening now. The social process is continuous. Do we know, for instance, whether we shall have even, the political form of denocracy in this country? In England the present ministers have agreed that there shall be no election until three years after the War. This may mean that the present government, with slight changes, will have had a span of life eovering more than a decade.

If we are engaged in the war in 1944 shall we bother to hold an election? If we find a satisfactory way of living without elections, will it not be easy to convince ourselve that all the just about democracy is hardly worth will the loss about democracy is hardly worth while?

In financial publications we read between the lines that industrial leaders are adjusting themselves in the idea of a regulated economy. They are not opposed to the New Deal. They have found a way of living within its framework, and any criticism of it is discreted at its management, not at the philosophy. Boes this attitude portent collectivism by and for monopolishs? Fascism?

After the war there may be an attempt to pick up where we left off. But the huge national debt, the hardships attending the change to a peace economy, the lack of jobs, the distillusionment of a mained hatton fusty hards a social upheaval. Will here be a revolution? Communism?

Too many varying forces are attwork shaping our future; We cannot predict what direction American civilization will take. All we can say with certainty is this:

It will shape itself by the low non—little men—find an adjustment. If they find the making of a living casy, and the pursuit of happiness not impossible, it will be that kind of civilization. From The threeman, a monthly critical journal of social and economic affairs).

SOON THE SCHOOLS WILL OPEN, and youngsters.

Soon THE SCHOOLS WILL OPEN, and youngsters will be chased from the freedom they now enjoy to the confinement of the classroom. Thus do we observe that mankind, unless given the discipline of compeleory education, would be less civilized than it now is
