There are those who ask, 'Can't a person be a Christian without belonging to the church?' Of course one can—but why let it be that lonely, the dangerous way? Men CAN climb mountains alone, but they rarely do and the accident averages is very high. We need each other. We're safer, happier and make more progress when we are linked together. The laughter and singing of a mountain climbing party in the high fusty air is one of the most beautiful sounds known to man. The sight of a lone climber who has never used the advantage of cooperation, the joy of fellowship, caught on a treacherous ledge, is one of the most pitiful sights to be seen. It is alone, join up with the nearest joyful band of climbers. They will welcome you, and you will find that the happiness of fellowship is that help you along is only excelled by the thrill you'll find in helping someone else.—Charles A. Wells.
