New Book Tells What's What About Army Insignia

By LINDO MOORE

What with uniforms all over the place, it's a wonder more of us aren't shown up by rank ignoramus like a lasso we know. Out dancing one evening with a man whose college R. O. T. C. courses make him practically a general, or something, she bubbled in shocked tones: "Look at that soldier there—without a coat! Isn't that against the regulations?"

O. R. C. explained gently about modern summer military uniform and pointed out the shiny gold bar adorning each shoulder of the officer in question, indicating to the initiated a correct, recently informed lieutenant.

A safeguard against further such blunders is the new book recently added to Baldwin Library, Insignia of the Services, by Paul Brown. Pencil sketches illustrate ranks of every branch of the armed forces of the United States. Each one shows clearly the insignia of rank, giving the proper number of bars, stars, chevrons, etc., so that one can easily learn to tell a chief petty officer from an Ohio private.

Other recent books of interest now in the library collection include the following: Blackout, by Archie Binns. The exuberant and incredible history of Seattle, written with a light touch and to read with gusto. Indian wars, the coming of the railroad, the tale of the "Blackfoot," the great fire, ingredients that make this history as exciting as any novel.

Northwest Gateway, by Archie Binns. The exuberant and incredible history of Seattle, written with a light touch and to read with gusto. Indian wars, the coming of the railroad, the tale of the "Blackfoot," the great fire, ingredients that make this history as exciting as any novel.

Sir Richard Burton's Wife, by Joan Burton. One of the most amazing figures of the 19th century was this historically famous girl who fell steadily in love with the bizarre and romantic explorer, Richard Burton. She moved heaven and earth in order to marry him and afterwards led a happy life in Africa and the East.

All of Their Lives, by Myron Brinig. Two women loved the same man with revealing complications for their entire lives.

Pencil Points to Murder, by W. A. Ricker. A criminal artist turns amateur detective.

Aw, Poor Bunny Three Are Hurt In Sudden Stop

An unexpected stop resulted in a crash at 2505 a. m. Sunday on Hunter boulevard near East Maple.

According to Charles Fells, 21 years old, of 1823 Hennetta, he was driving north on Hunter, following Samuel Nixon, 23 years old, 5540 Vinewood, Detroit. When Nixon stopped suddenly, Fells crashed into his car.

Miss Helen Stanger, of 404 Park avenue, riding with Fells, was given first aid at St. Joseph's hospital for a forehead cut, the result of flying glass. Stanger, the other car, Mrs. Leibel Morrison, 5504 Cameron, Detroit, and Mrs. Emma Standford, 3686 Quincy, Cleveland, were also taken to the hospital for first aid.

Department store heads and small shopkeepers, industrialists both large and small, are to have an opportunity to see and inspect the latest in fluorescent lighting and lighting fixtures when the Fluorescent Light Exposition, featuring educational exhibits designed to demonstrate this amazing new light source, opens a three-day showing in Detroit at the Detroit Grand Hotel on Wednesday, July 10, and under the sponsorship of the Electric City of Detroit.

The exposition's opening day will be given over entirely to representatives of the lighting industry who will attend a special pre-opening meeting on that night at 8 o'clock, at which time several brief talks on the future of the light source will be given. President of the Fluorescent Light Exposition will be Angus B. Melroy, of Birmingham, sales manager of the Detroit Edison Company, the meeting will present as speakers: J. S. Miller, president of the Electrical Testing Laboratories of New York, E. D. Stricker of the General Electric Lamp Department, Cleveland, and Lee Taylor, assistant superintendent of the lighting division of Detroit Edison.

The last two days of the exposition will be turned over to commercial and industrial leaders, contractors, architects and persons interested in the newest type of lighting. The entire exhibit—and there will be more than 500 sections of material on display—will be arranged over by "Miss Fluorescence." She will be given in a fluorescent dress which takes on a dazzling brilliance when subjected to "black light."

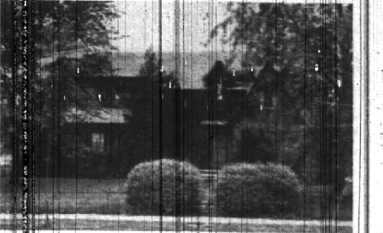

In addition, the Fluorescence will show the latest in lighting fixtures, "magnetic" light color, magic lamp assembly and testing parts, and murals of actual installations. The show is expected to attract thousands of interested operators in view of the vital part this type lighting is playing in the current national defense program.

More Game Seen In Casino Area
DENNING—Dear old, good, honest game is more plentiful in the great Casino area than at any time in the past five years, in the opinion of George Brannan, manager of the Casino area. Large swarms of sharp-shinned hawks also have been reported.
