Onions and Their Relations

There is more than one way to add a flavor of onion to a dish. More delicate and permitting variation are chives, shallots and leek.

Chives are perennials best started from divisions of other plants, although they can be grown from seed. Once established they spread and once they are frozen, they can be potted and brought indoors for the winter. My own chives bordering the vegetable garden center path is so lovely and it brings forth a great deal of comment and produces flowers large enough to use for bouquets. Cut back after blooming to prevent seeds forming.

Leeks are grown too seldom in this country. They must be started early and transplanted in July when about the size of a lead pencil. Make a hole with a dibber, stick in the leek and cover just the roots, letting the rest fill by itself.

Shallots and both early and later onions can be started to great advantage by using sets. Spring onions, of course, come quickly from seed.

Leek Polonaise

Cook leek in salted water until tender; drain and place in a well-buttered dish. Cover the white part of the leek with chopped hard boiled eggs, grated cheese, parsley, salt and pepper. Place in oven a few moments. Serve with bread crumbs browned in butter.

Boiled leek may be served with butter and hardboiled eggs or hollandaise sauce.

Sauce Soubise
(Good with lamb chops)

Soak 8 or 10 onions in cold water. Boil them three hours. Pass through a sieve. Place in saucepan with 2 tablespoons butter, 1 teaspoon melted sugar. Cook slowly for half hour, stirring often. Add yolks of 2 eggs and ¼ cup cream, salt and pepper. Beat together and serve.

Sauce Vincent (serve with fish)

Cut up a bunch of chives, 3 fresh shallots, handful of cheryl, (you might substitute parsley) a few leaves of tarragon (if you do not have the leaves a few drops of tarragon vinegar will help). Crush everything and sieve it or chop very fine. Add this to mayonnaise.

In Soup

Leeks may be used in place of onions in the traditional French onion soup or may be combined with potatoes in a leek and potato soup with milk.

Child Is Injured In Crash, Saturday

High weeds at Southlawn and Pierce were blamed by Mrs. Marjorie LaBelle, 1620 Henrietta, for her crash Saturday morning with a car driven by Carson C. Bingham. The latter was traveling south on Pierce; Mrs. LaBelle was going east on Southlawn, and turning left onto Pierce. She said she stopped before turning. Elizabeth LaBelle, 12 years old, received broken teeth and arm and leg bruises.

Worried Over Pals; Crash Is Result

A driver whose attention was distracted by his "buddies" in the car crashed into the parked machine of Donald L. Cummings, 436 Greenwood, in front of Wilson's drug store Sunday morning.

The driver, Sam Francis, 24 years old, of 17523 Arlington, Detroit, driving south on Woodward, wrote in his police report: "I asked my buddies how they were doing. They did not answer so I turned to see what was the matter." In that fleeting moment, Cumming's auto was hit.

Francis' knee was bruised.

Youth Orchestra Impresses Critic

By FENTON R. MATHEWS

The world of today lives on surprises and upset traditions, some spontaneous and some designed, but for those who thoroughly enjoy the best of music at low cost, a surprise awaits them in a small building in an apple orchard just a few smiles from here.

The Will-O-Way Youth Orchestra composed of 14 serious-minded and intelligent young people working at the business end of the greatest of musical instruments, violins, viola, and violoncellos, and capably directed, by Celia Irene Merrill, deliver extremely satisfying music. They play at "coffee concerts" Saturdays and Sundays at 4 p. m.

It does seem strange to find the music that our great masters composed and played, now being played right in our midst. It is daring, venturesome and down right risky to defy the subtle education that has seized our great American in the past score of years. However, it is delightful as attested by the audience that seemed as puzzled as this reviewer.

The right-about-face from the maudlin sounds that oozes from radio, motion picture, stage, beer garden, was as just stated, daring.

To see young people interested, not in politics, economic bickering or the other things that bedevil confused and smug Americans—to see them satisfying an urge for betterment that will burn to one, but, instead, will bring joy, is worth the price of admission, even if one should place cotton in his ears.

The soloist, Ruth Dean, who is a student of the world's greatest harpist, Carlos Salzedo, is a young woman who plays the harp with genuine understanding.

Playing "Clair de Lune," by Debussy, accompanied by the orchestra and for an encore, "Night Breeze," by Salzedo, elicited the unanimous admiration of the audience.

"Concerto Grosso" by Sammartini is a colorful and vigorous composition and under the skillful direction of Celia Merrill, many effects and contrasts introduced that were worthy of a professional orchestral director.

"Serenade," by Tschaikowsky, and "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik," by Mozart, revealed the many excellent points of this new youth orchestra.

Charles Turner, of Birmingham, is the concert master this Saturday and Sunday, assisted by Bertha Roth of Pontiac.

With the squandering on money like water by those who control our lives it would be nice if a small amount could be used to utilize this very small group to show the natives of our land what real music is and thereby help to restore sanity and normalcy.

Men Scarce; Hire Women Lifeguards

LANSING—Taking the places of men busied with the defense effort, women lifeguards will watch over bathers on at least two big Michigan beaches this summer.

At Paul Bawas state park Kate Lee of Saginaw, a registered nurse and Red Cross life saving examiner, has been employed and at Bay City state park Marie Dorman is now on duty, the parks division of the conservation department reported today.

On both beaches women proved satisfactory guards some years ago.

Staking Necessary in Your Garden

Properly staked plants insure an orderly garden. Lack of proper staking means that you are reasonably sure to have some wrecked and messy beds later in the season. A heavy rain or wind storm is likely to knock over tall and heavy foliage plants which naturally have stems not sufficiently sturdy to stand up under such circumstances.

Delphiniums

Delphiniums are the first plants in the garden to show the need for staking. The heavy spikes of bloom on these stately perennials make them singularly susceptible to destruction by winds or heavy rains. Stake them before the buds start to open and save the beauty of the delphiniums. Gladiolus
