

Some years after the French Revolution had run its course, a very famous man said, "It is what did not do during the Revolution?" The old gentleman, smiling in recollection, added, "Young man, I was considered an eccentric man in those days, all I really could do was to live through it."

What Is More Impressive Than A Graduating Class?

Last Sunday evening, together with other parents of boys and girls being graduated in this year's class, we held a school board meeting with Dr. Averill in the Birmingham First Baptist church where baccalaureate services were held. It was the third time for my school board to meet since this nature; the other two times being when sons Bill and John, at three in maroon cap and gown, vision into the combined local wisdom into the consciousness of graduating classes.

The occasion last Sunday evening included daughter Susan who had just made her first lady cry right here in Birmingham; the year's heald along all too rapidly, and now seems too soon reached that in her life she has broken those paths that, at least, lead so much away from the home of her early youth.

Yet this is life. It always has been, and always will be. Nature is one of growth, growing from infant helplessness to adult self-reliance. So our babies reach the fullness of the stature of men and women; and that makes many parents at times wistful and a sad.

But that was a grand sight last Sunday evening, as those maroon-and-white-clad schools, with their young students, had marched down the church aisle to seats arranged for them; I don't think there is any procession that a more hopefully impressive, more fervent in Utopian dreams, than the passing of a graduating class.

From the public press schools, "I have written the final draft of my three hopefuls"; I hope to live to see them graduate from college or university. And then . . . well, another year, another batch of grandchildren, who in turn can run the gamut of our educational processes, will similarly affect their environment. This is the cycle of the great life; it is part of the American way.

Daughter Susan Ponders Our Public School Values

For 17 years I have waited for the day when daughter Susan would write something to fill this column, and finally it's here. That day came last week, in the form of a High school annual, The Piper, came of the press, and in the front portion of it was an editorial by our school editor, a graduate who had edited a magazine, had written: "With pride, pardonable pride of a fond Dad, I'm re-printing her notions on a subject that perplexes many adults today. So here are her ponderable words:

"We people of the United States are lucky! We live under the most perfect government in the world created for the welfare of the individual. We are at liberty to think, speak, worship, and write as we please. Everyone is on an equal level, for we have . . . facilities for all. We all have the same opportunities. It depends upon the individual whether he makes the most of these opportunities or lets them pass."

"Our parents start us out in life; here we have the opportunity of learning shewence, courage, cooperation, and leadership. They were sent to school primarily to further our education. However, the school offers much more than mental training; it offers a multitude of opportunities.

"To learn the fundamentals of the democratic way, we students practice good citizenship through participation in our affairs. We are given a voice in school government and are encouraged to take responsibilities.

"The program of athletics, open to all, will build strong bodies and learn good sportsmanship and teamwork. We learn to compete hard, to take defeat and victory.

"When we go to school, we meet many kinds of people and learn how to get along with everyone; we are moulded into a brotherhood with mutual interests. Everyone can be every one else's friend and companion.

"We are encouraged to realize the best that is in us, and to realize additional forms of realization. When we have worked to the best of our abilities, our achievement is acknowledged in the form of graduation and high honors.

"Where else in the world today would we have all these opportunities? We are all a part of the progress of our life and our way of living and our way of doing! We thank God for the things which make these possible: the school for our training, our parents for our example, and our country for democracy!"

Tax Proposal Loses; Rosso, Joslyn Win

Board Organizes Wednesday Night; Officers Re-elected

Birmingham voters rejected by a 675 to 446 vote the proposed tax increase of two mills in an annual school budget Monday night with Dr. Averill in the Birmingham First Baptist church where baccalaureate services were held. It was the third time for my school board to meet since this nature; the other two times being when sons Bill and John, at three in maroon cap and gown, vision into the consciousness of graduating classes.

Club Buys Defense Bond

The first organization in Birmingham to subscribe in the general drive to sell defense bonds was the Lions Club. Shown here driving the car are DR. J. A. MULLEN, PRESIDENT RICHARD H. FLEMING, P. C. BURNETT, VICE PRESIDENT, Birmingham National Bank, and ROBERT McGRAW, all club members. The club presents $74 in the bond, and will collect $100 in 12 years.

Graduation Held At Bloomfield No. 5

Annual eighth-grade commencement exercises were held last night at the Bloomfield Village School (Bloomfield District No. 5). Dr. Charles Richard Walker, president of Birmingham public education, officiated.

Fifteen diplomas were presented. George A. Beauchamp is the first graduate of the school which will close Friday.

The group of officers and Col. William B. Baldwin, president of Roseveart road; Col. John S. Lambie, M. D., of 280 Asaph road; and Captain David G. Flitch of the 10th Cavalry, Col. Rosevar is the Field Artillery, who served overseas in the World War. He was graduated from West Point in 1913. He is subject to all calls for service, and is now mobilized. Mr. Lambie, who served overseas more than a year, told The Eclectic that it is not likely he will be called in case of war, as he is now associated with General Motors, Corp., which served abroad 21 months during the World War, is in the Quartermaster Corps, and has been ordered to report next week to the Fourth Corps Area at the graduation. A graduate of the school, who will receive his diploma at the summer session, is John C. Knobell, who served in the U.S. Army during the World War.
