Knocking on Wood

with JOHN H. HARWOOD

Louis, Conn, Russia and Germany

SATURDAY evening, I viewed motion pictures of the Joe Louis-Billy Conn heavyweight fight, and as I rode home, the car radio brought news of Germany's declaration of war against Russia. Both battles milled around in my mind, and finally there appeared a sort of similarity in the conflicts—the two pugs on one hand, and Germany vs. the world, on the other.

Beaten to the Punch
After hearing the radio broadcast last Wednesday evening, I was surprised to see in pictures how much Conn had been overated. To be sure, he was faster than Louis, and beat him to the punch very frequently, but anyone who has seen prizefights can appreciate a 175-pounder's ability to move more quickly than a big man. (You ought to see a couple of flyweights go at it!) For 10 rounds, Joe plodded after Conn, who backed and circled constantly, always a poor target. Joe did look bad at times. But when he came to a showdown, when Conn elected to stand up and trade punches, it was all over. So the right answer for the fighting Irishman to the canvas, and Joe Louis remained as boxing's greatest champion. (The color of a man's skin is something I do not take into consideration.)

Germany's position is somewhat like that of Bill Conn. Militant maneuvering against bigger opponents, but actually weak in total resources, which may not decide simple battles, but which do determine the outcome of wars and the fate of nations. Conn won many rounds but not the last one.

In attacking Russia, I believe the Nazis have lowered their guard. It is possible they will scatter the Russians with their military genius, and capture the Ukraine and Moscow, but meanwhile, England will give more time to gather her bomber armada which in time is to make a shambles of Germany. The fight will cost the Germans heavily in men and supplies, for the battleground is vast and Germany's resources are not. A victory over Russia will be impressive, but who is left to be impressed? Germany has already built 600 or completed every atom bomb reach except England, and America is not afraid.

A Sign of Weakness?
Perhaps the Russian campaign is a sign of weakness. It is obvious that such a fight on so vast a scale would be costly; a quick invasion of England, if successful, would be decisive. Hitler dates no attempt an all-out attack on England, the British become stronger. Not daring to invade England, the Germans proceeded to attack a non-belligerent neighbor on the west hoping to get resources for a long war with Britain.

Hitler can not win a long campaign.

New Way to Plenty
Appearing in the Detroit News for the first time is an interesting and important series by Blair Moody, the News' Washington correspondent. Moody has been asking the question: What would the United States do to get our economy back on an even keel when the war boom is over? The most important paragraph in the whole series had to do with the liberal-radical crusade against the reactionary program.

What are the poor fellows going to do against Communism? Always must be fighting against their neighbors about something, now that war is over. It is a pity that would be a nice thing to see Hitler kicked, the general unanimity is going to be just too much!

Eating the Standpoint of Health and Good
If everyone in the United States was given a satisfactory diet, from the standpoint of health and good eating, it would be a great thing to consume twice as much green vegetables and fruit, says Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard.

Cousins At $1,000 Each
A 75-year-old heiress recently left an estate of $570,000 in Washington, and specified that $1,000 went to go to each of her cousins, regardless of remoteness of relationship.

People who are leaders in their vocation never cease in their search for more information upon it. It is said that even the great Carson, perhaps the best tenor singer who ever lived, looks less right up to his death. His example ought to stimulate others to continue to perfect themselves in their present heights. Like muscles that develop through constant exercise, the mind becomes enriched through unceasing study. Nobody knows all that he or she can know—which is one reason why human life extends past the teen age.

The Ants are Ready
The ants are ready for the picnic season. Are you, camera fans? They're being prepared, I mean more than just having on hand an adequate supply of film. Why not start a different picnic pictures—not just the kind where everyone lines up and stares into the lens while you snap the shutter.

Some New Books
Textbooks on photography are any other textbook, but they are well for theories and ideas. But when it's up to you to try them out, master them. But if you are really serious about the hobby, don't ignore what the experts have to say. Most of them have foregone more than you or I will ever know about the business.

We Must Avoid Inflation

The people of the United States are beginning to wonder whether expenditures necessitated by the demand for war will result in inflationary prices and thus carry us to another pinnacle from which we will inevitably descend into another depression.

It may be said at the beginning that the first requisite for another depression is a period of inflation. Consequently, responsible economic experts, in aid of the Government, are agreed that steps should be taken to prevent advancing prices which will culminate in a wild orgy of buying.

With the increased tempo of defense spending, the people of the United States will have more money to spend. It is also certain that industrial plants are turned from normal production into the production of defense materials, the shortage of goods may become pronounced.

Given more money and fewer goods, it is certain that prices will go up. Prospective buyers hid against each other for decreasing supplies. This would be the case in any free economy. Consequently, the Government is almost compelled to take steps to limit the buying power of the public.

One way to do this is to set a price upon goods and commodities. Another way is to provide heavy taxation in order to drain off excess purchasing power. This end is also accomplished by persuading the people to invest in Government bonds for defense financing.

The British Government recently attempted to inaugurate a new system of control. It provided heavy income taxes, which included a plan for compulsory saving. Thus, a man who paid $383 a year in taxes was given a credit of $400 which could be given available to him at the end of the year.

This plan has several advantages, including the absorption of excess purchasing power during the emergency and an automatic provision for a savings account to cushion post-war decreases in the income of individuals. It may be copied in this country.

We hope the people of the United States will be smart enough to encourage the Government to take whatever steps are necessary to prevent a repetition of the inflation orgy which developed in the United States during the last war. The remedy may seem to be harsh, but it will help us if it enables the nation to avoid a disastrous depression after the defense effort is unnecessary.

Our Eating
The National Nutrition Conference, called to consider the food problems of the people of this country, emphasized the need for more attention to the matter of proper diets, even by families that are able to afford all necessary food.

Mr. Wickard declared that at least one-fourth of our families not on relief have poor diets and estimated that at least three-fourths of this country eat unsatisfactory diets. One of the best uses for land is for cotton and wheat, said he, would be in the production of products to build up the health and stamina and strength of our people.

Kites and Wires
Some of the year starts with gray hair and many years have to enjoy their kite-flying by proxy, but boys and girls will go on once again putting up their kites in the breeze.

It is well to take the opportunity to stay away from electric power lines and high wires. Don't use wire for a kite string or a cord with metal of wire in it. Be sure the cord isn't wet. If your kite breaks loose and the cord falls across electric wires, leave it alone.

Of course, you know that wet feet boys and girls who actually fly kites each spring, will read this editorial. Wives, perhaps kites fliers, remember the days of their youth, might be reminded the caution their youngster should be given: "Don't warn, sometimes, might save a young life."

A Few Weeks Ago We Saved Father Grim

In the crowd was a little old man. We saw him grin, and he saw the muscles of his face work convulsively. His boy was going. His family has only other boys to service in other days. His only boy is one of the old and famous of the old-fashioned country. He comes from one of those families often referred to as the "nobles of America," and the "salt of the earth."

The train came, we saw the little old man get the young man's son, a pat on the back. Each looked into the other's eyes, and smiled. There was a world of meaning in those last few big little, very little, was said. The train left. The crowd dispersed.

The little old man turned and walked away. His chin tucked up. He looked straight ahead. He went two ways he entered a business place and dropped into a chair in an obscure corner.

Then the little old man lost control of the emotions he had bottled up. The love of the son and the loneliness that had been covered up with grimace came surging to the surface. He was weeping and sobbing. He hugged himself. His own man's smiling face is hard to witness. Those near him tried to see him, or hear him.

Yes, there is a sound reason for Father's Day. It is a day when we remember the strong member of the family, so, the fatherly knows how to do when there is a day set aside to make him over him.

Advertising is not a miscellaneous system that a merchant can sell shop-worn, out-of-date merchandise. The same profit that he expected to receive when the goods were newly arrived in the place of business.

In fact, advertising is not a device to sell anything that is not the most up-to-date that the customer can get. The merchant who advertises his goods knows that his merchandise must meet competition, which means that it must be as good as anything offered to consumers, whether the offering is in the form of a newspaper through advertising.

Advertising does not increase the utility of the articles advertised to any prospective buyer. This is the basis of many attacks upon advertising by those who do not realize that advertising is a modern salesmanship. Business men employ advertising to improve the standards of their products, to improve the standards of their employees, to improve the standards of their services. They are only expected to sell.

Advertising is a sales promoter. It does not affect merchandise, except to speed-up its sale. It is a merchant to customer. If there are enough "specials" in the merchant's carrying a faster turn-over, values improve, carrying expenses and is able to operate on smaller profits per item because he sells more items.
