Barbara Jean Frauderick was six years old March 12 and her mother invited the little girls of the kindergarten class to help celebrate with ice cream and cakes and games and prizes and things. Judy Bates, Carolyn Cogger, Carolyn Brown, Shirley Dragoo, Beth Fleury, Sally Ann Senlby and Jean Sampson were present. Little girls with fluffy curls with perky bows and dancing toes, sweet little eats in dimities, dressed to show their dimpled knees. Beautiful little girls their faces aglow, their eyes like beacons, shining so! Shy and demure they came to say "Happy Birthday—Barbara."

Dance A Success

The St. Patrick's dance given for the pupils in High School last Friday night was a great success, according to the jitterbugs. The auditorium was festive in gay balloons string from the ceiling and as a grand finale time, they came to the floor with a bounce, hundreds of them, and the dancers broke apart to catch them, for in one was a card entitling the holder to a prize. In April a formal dance will be given for the grown-up young folks.

Mrs. Ralph L. Stephenson, of Saratoga boulevard, reported that she is not entertaining this month and do wonder! A three-alarm fire burned down her husband's tie business, and he is so busy now trying to reestablish his interests, house in other quarters that she scarcely ever sees him.

Eton Road Drain Deal 'Bargain'

Residents who live in the northwest section of Birmingham received a "bargain" in the Eton road drain insofar as local taxation is concerned. Forty-three per cent of the cost was paid by PWA grant.

The estimated cost was $55,000 and the actual cost was $55,436. City Manager Donald C. Eckert reported to the Commission. A grant of $24,111 came from the federal government. Of the share to be paid locally, $10,761 will be assessed against the Grand Trunk, Robert Porritt, and others for property outside the city; $13,148 for property within the city in the district; and $7,386 against the taxpayers at large.

The sewer has long been in operation but assessment was delayed to permit lots in the sewer-age sale to be bought. Future buyers will be assessed a charge to cover cost of the drain.

Bills will be sent out next week.

Say Tax Commission Will Press Payment Of Intangibles Tax

LANSING—The names of several thousand people allegedly liable to payment of an intangible tax have been submitted to the State Tax Commission for investigation. Some names have been submitted in writing; others by persons who were called at the Commission offices to pay their intangible taxes.

No action will be taken by the Commission until after March 25, the last day for payment of taxes without penalty save in those instances in which later dates have been authorized in writing.

Thereafter, the examples of the federal government in administration of the income tax law will be followed. Every name submitted will be checked on, in the absence of an intangible tax return from such person.

Among those reported to the Commission as prospective tax evaders are described not individuals, holding mortgages and land contracts; professional men with large amounts of accounts receivable; householders with cash in safety deposit boxes, and others who have made no less openly declared their intention of disregarding the tax.
