Cranbrook Expedition Movies Are Ready

Members of the Cranbrook Institute of Science Friday evening will have the first opportunity to see color films of an expedition led by J. L. Smith to the interior Dutch and French Guiana. The expedition, conducted for the Institute by Smith, has just been completed.

During parts of the trip he traveled in a dugout canoe and penetrated as far as the Brazilian border. In the course of his travels he visited and photographed Bonaparte guild workings, and the village of the king of the Bonka or Saramacca Negroes. Here for eleven days he had unusual opportunity to photograph village life and dances.

Little Things
