This week Miss Eee Pope, who is head of the state and county American Women's Volunteer Societies, has completed the list of persons who are to take part in the round table on "Women in Defense." Mrs. Cleveland Walcutt, president of the council has also announced the names of the Institute's official secretaries.

Each member of the discussion will give a very brief talk on a particular topic which will be followed by a round table discussion. The talks will include one on "A Start in Defense Organization" by Mrs. Raymond C. Perkins, of Royal Oak, chairman of the Southern Oakland County Branch of the Oakland County Unit of the A. W. V. S. "The Homemaker and Defense" is to be the topic of Mrs. William Jackson, chairman of the Social Study groups of the A.A.U.W. The last topic listed is "Recreation in Building for Defense," by Mrs. George C. Bradley, Community Council delegate to the Recreation Commission. After intermission the speakers will join the audience and Miss Pope is to lead a general discussion for the remainder of the time.

Official secretaries for the institute, as announced by Mrs. Walcutt, are Mrs. Ralph E. H. Cunningham, religion group; Mrs. John K. Ormond, women in defense; Mrs. Stanley Sprague, education; Mrs. Ralph Rockelunch, city planning, and Lloyd G. Chapman, recreation.

The slate of these people is to be taken to the November 4 council meeting and to give a general report of the discussion at the combined evening luncheon which will close the institute.

Maryanna Craig Chooses Blue Satin For Wedding Gown

Before an altar simply decorated with bouquets of white chrysanthemums and Easter lilies in Christ Church Cranbrook Saturday evening, Maryanna Craig and Henry Leonard Miller repeated their nuptial vows with the Rev. Charles H. Cadigan officiating. Maryanna is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Lathrop Craig, of Cherry Ridge road, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Joy Miller, of Grosse Ile.

Water lilies were the prevailing color theme of decorations in the church and Maryanna also chose a gown of water blue satin. The dress featured an off-shoulder treatment, the sleeves being full at the shoulder and tapering down to a narrow wrist. A high roll collar outlined the neck of the dress and a small square of pearls centered the bodice. The bride's very full skirt was gathered at the sides and ended in a graceful train. She carried a prayer book, trimmed with seed pearls, held her tulle veil in place.

Instead of a bridal bouquet, Maryanna carried a shower bouquet belonging to her maternal great grandmother, which has been used in many family weddings. Sprays of lily-of-the-valley, showered with satin streamers hanging from the prayer book.

A cyclamen taffy gown with a bouffant skirt formed the gown of the maid of honor, Sheila Craig, sister of the bride. The fitted bodice of the gown had a yoke of scalloped velveteen at the low neckline and long sleeves. Her headdress was a tiny tricorn velveteen hat, and he carried a flat purse of velveteen fastened a bouquet of long-stemmed roses.

The bride-maids, dressed exactly alike, the maid of honor, and Miss Barbara Craig, Mrs. Richard Craig, Mrs. Robert Craig, Jr., brothers of the bride, and Frederick S. Hall, Mr. Craig gave his daughter away in marriage.

Henry Jane Miller was best man for his brother and the ushers were Robert Craig, brother of the bride, Mr. Craig, Jr., brothers of the bride, and Frederick S. Hall. Small Nancy Holmes, the flower girl, wore a dress reminiscent of those worn by the bridesmaid as she strewed rose petals in the path of the bridal gown.

Mrs. Miller chose a gown of black and pink silk jersey and wore a black tulle hat for the occasion, and Mrs. Craig wore a powder blue crepe dress and accessories. Both had orchid corsages.

Following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Craig held a reception at their home following the wedding ceremony. White chrysanthemums, roses, and lilies were used throughout the house for decoration.

After a trip to Virginia Beach, Mr. and Mrs. Miller plan to make their home in Ypsilanti. For traveling the bride wore a cinnamon brown and beige plaid suit with a matching hat and lynx trimmed dark blue topcoat. Her accessories were brown.

Upper Peninsula Forests in Peril

The Department of Agriculture warned today that forest resources in Michigan's Upper Peninsula are threatened with serious injury because of overcutting in the area. Some 758 million board feet are being taken annually, although good management would allow not more than 583 million. Existing forests are to be maintained and a large group of lumbering industries supported on a permanent basis.

The Department's Forest Service reports that the allowable yield could be increased within 40 years to 820 million board feet and eventually to 1,000 million feet a year, but the increased cut, it said, even the maintenance of present production, depends upon the creation of sustained yield units and the elimination of timber "mining" or destructive methods of harvesting.

At the present annual rate of 758 million feet, it will not be many years before usable forest resources are gone, says a new Forest Service report on the Upper Peninsula.
