

Analyze Ways Hunters Get Shot

LANSING—Simple little mistakes are what the sportsman must guard against if he wants to get his name in the newspapers for his competence, rather than his lack of it, as a hunter.

Analysis of the 112 hunting accidents recorded last season by the conservation department show the most frequent accident causes were: stray shot or bullets (13 cases), shooting when not sure of target (11), tripping or falling and accidentally discharging gun (11), discharge of gun while climbing or going through fences (10) and getting in the line of fire (eight).

Six persons were injured unloading guns carelessly, two by playing with loaded guns, one when cleaning a loaded gun, three by having a loaded gun in home or car and one by having a loaded gun in a car—which is a violation of the law as well as of safety rules.

Seven guns fell from where they were leaned against fences, walls, stumps or running boards to cause injury. Three guns exploded—as old twist barrel shot out every season when used with ammunition too heavy for them. Faults of the novice—excitement, lack of care, lack of knowledge about use of guns—caused just three accidents. Using guns to throw things out of holes and brush piles cost two injuries and pursuing game with the safety net cost three.

Reckless use of firearms in a boat, handling a gun by the muzzle, resting the muzzle on the foot and carelessly demonstrating how game was killed were responsible for five accidents. The remaining 23 were not gun accidents but miscellaneous injuries, drowning and heart attacks.

Of the 112 accidents, 35 were fatal. Less than one in five every 1,000 of Michigan's three quarters of a million licensed hunters was hurt.

Smallest baby pygmy hippopotamus is this little fellow, smaller than a puppy, brought to the United States from Liberia, Africa. It is a perfect scale model of the big fellows you see in the zoo.

Fritters Enliven Routine Menus

To some, fritters are a more possible use of leftovers, but for those who are always looking for ways to make a menu more interesting, fritters offer an opportunity.

A fritter is a piece of meat, fish, or vegetable covered with batter and fried in deep fat. It should be cooked thoroughly and a delicate brown in color before it is served.

- Fritter Batter
1 cup flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 cup milk
2 tablespoons powdered sugar
for fritters only.
- Carrot Fritters
Cook very young carrots in boiling salted water until tender.
Drain, dip in batter and fry in deep hot fat. Drain and serve with white sauce.
- Pineapple Fritters
Sprinkle a little sugar, grated pineapple and lemon juice over slices of canned pineapple. Dip in batter and fry in deep hot fat.
- Cauliflower Fritters
Sprinkle pieces of cold cooked cauliflower with salt and pepper. Dip in batter and fry in deep fat.
- Apple Fritters
Cut up small apples.

Plumbing Codes Need Modernizing

BY HERBERT U. NELSON
(Executive vice president, National Association of Real Estate Boards)

In our grave concern for the conservation of metals and other critically needed materials, and in reacting against the shortage of skilled man power, very visible in the building industry, there is one ancient statute that needs no amendment. That is waste involved in obsolete building codes. Clearly the standard plumbing code for houses developed by the Bureau of Standards and published a little less than a year ago should now be brought into general use.

Priority regulations for home building and "so-called" search for substitute materials bring new pressure on cities to modernize their building code throughout. It would seem that any city failing to do this is not only heavily handicapping its home-building industry but in fact endangering the whole position of its builders in getting materials on the critical list.

Informed estimates made to the Home Builders Institute of America as to the amount that would be saved on an ordinary small house through the use of the model plumbing code as against existing plumbing code are significant. The amount of the savings depends upon the amount of "make-work" in the present code, on the extent to which its requirements are for things no longer essential for health or safety, and on the degree to which it bars out the use of new and more economical materials and processes.
