From the Women's Angle

By LILLIAN DIEDERICH

I don't want to see the world in fire. Still, a mild fire, a personal one, might help. I come from a home chock in a world full of talent...

But back to everyday, U. S. How can we start even a mild conflagration what with cooking, cleaning, washing, ironing, mending, sewing, small jobs, running errands, and keeping that residential factory radio program...

Weeks of anxiety follow. Furrows deepen in plain brows. Small gray wigs distinguish braided tresses. Numbers are carried lower skyward. The price is mentally counted and arranged in neat files...

After weeks of planning how best to spend the $1000 check, the day finally dawns and just a cloud in the sky... they are off in your befuddled brain! Bravely with high color you wait. Slowly the theme song is played. Loudly a horn blares forth aggressively...

Have You Met...
