

An ideal is a vision that one holds in order to become a better person, it is like a gleam of light, but it may be dark and cloudy day—yet, it may light up the immediate landscape, and keep one from stumbling into a pit. Like the stars, an ideal is always out of reach—but they do give one a real sense of good direction.

HS and THAT

"This, Too, Shall Pass" While the surface conditions of the world in which we live today are troubled, and most of us are confronted with problems of tremendous importance, there are words from their long thinking and observation of and upon the history of mankind. Sent from a clipping from a recent issue of the Rotarman Magazine, he is stimulated by these words:

It was the poet Emma Lazarus who wrote the inscription on the Statue of Liberty, in New York Harbor: "Seek Pharos's race today, and you shall find that most, silent and dusty sleep... and today a roofless ruin stands above the imperial race of everlasting Rome. In regard to the affair next Thursday night, to the general public, students and adults, Mayor John E. Martz is not the visionary, the poet, the artist, the thinker, the visionary, the poet, the Commissioner, the Fuehrer, the Isaiah, the Commander-in-Chief, the Spinahead, the Einstein, will live long after the name of Hitler has faded from the memory of men. It was Thales, the Greek philosopher, more than 25 centuries ago, who declared that "In the end, the world will never see a tyrant growing old." History will repeat itself!
