

DESIGNED IN AMERICA

FEMININE DRESSES "ENLIST FOR SERVICE"

Designers Fashion Dresses to Fit Our New Way of Life

The common denominator of varied interests to divide the way the American woman spends her time, also serves to clearly indicate that her wardrobe must encompass a range of fashions which will see her appropriately dressed for the pursuit of each and of those interests.

Everything—from basic silhouette to elegant trimming, marks this season's dresses as new. She who would shop both wisely and well will want to be a fashion expert in her own right, so this little style resume is aimed to make the reader an authority, at least on the matter of how her personal wardrobe should be planned.

Career woman or housewife by vocation, every woman will have vocations this year; some related to charity work, relief drives, patriotic endeavors. There'll be club meetings, galas, committee sessions, and evening "soirées," for which a variety of fashions can be worn.

Costume suits combine simply but intricately detailed dresses with jackets, fitted, or more waagring full length coats, usually untrimmed, sometimes fur trimmed with one of the season's popular furs.

Femininity Leads

Dresses are for the most part feminine, with even the spectator style softened, with unpressed pleats, midly contours, and capacious pockets, while color runs the full gamut from basic black, brown and winter navy, through a flat-boring range of blues and greys, to best reds, tan, corals, to pale natural tones.

There is a clearly defined trend toward the slimmer skirt silhouette. In fact, high fashion skirts for daytime dresses are being shown as narrow as 20 inches in width. This does not mean that skirts are as yet "straight and narrow" for you will still find fluidity of line and a modified fullness somewhere. "Fullness above" is the season's smart in feeling, wearing in either a dressy or sport direction, depending on the degree of fullness, and color which "qualifies it."

Fall Coat Styles Not Dressy Nor Really 'Sportsy'

Everything is good in moderation, and this season's coat styles give every proof that this is as true in fashion as it is in life. The rule of contact by being neither completely dressy nor completely sportsy, this fall's smartest coat is the season's smart in feeling, wearing in either a dressy or sport direction, depending on the degree of fullness, and color which "qualifies it."

Smoothness characterizes the very fabrics chosen for the coats as well as the lines into which shoulders and hips are molded. Above all things, slimmness is achieved often enough by contrasts, as a slim waistline belted to the hips, and a skirt silhouette, the back of the skirt which is almost invariably narrow. There is also a little, but only a little, of the fullness, while one or two dresses in most collections show very modified fullness with a slim front line.

Longer waistlines are decidedly important, often with the accent given to the hipline. The long jersey jumper silhouette—the "moulded torso"—the elongated "basques" are all smart variations of the trend toward a lengthening waistline.

Shoulders are rounded, and have the slightly wide look of a man's jacket, however, they are never raised or puffed above the normal line.

Skirt lengths remain about 20 inches from the ground on the average, though the very young and the very extreme frequently wear their skirts almost showing the knee cap.

Of Material Interest

In fabrics, there is a distinct trend toward weaves with more surface interest. In crepes, which continue to be prevalent in daytime frocks, the famous old-time Roshahara and marcelin weaves are being revived—with even a few matelasse novelties being shown. In wools, soft spongy fabrics, often with slight hair treatments, are the fashion leaders, with hard finished crisp worsted crepes giving way to these softer, drapier types. It should be noted that subtle spun rayons are entering the market in such quantities as to warrant a mention.

Smartest in rayon sleeves are collar treatments of this silhouette, either conventionally notched like a boy's jacket, or in longer point, bubbly styling like the collar of a shirt.

Lively colors are no longer reserved for spring and summer wear, say the new suits! And by way of proof they take to soft prettiness largely achieved through sueded and hair surfaces.

Right Dress! New York Fashions That Merit a Medal

Smooth Feeling

Darts above the waistline, pressed fullness emanating from shoulder yokes, set-in belts shirred onto coat bodies, and slightly biased treatments all emphasize the new feeling that has gone into coats designed quite independently of foreign inspiration, by American designers for this current fall.

As smooth as shoulders, are hips—and no matter how much fullness is worked into a coat above its waistline, or how full the yardage in a coat's skirt, the actual hip contours are kept smooth and moulded, releasing soft fullness when wanted at the center-back or below the hip by means of set-out gores and untrimmed or unpressed pleats.

New Soft Fabrics, Beautiful Colors Featured in Suits

The suit picture this year is predominantly a more colorful one, for both sport and dress occasions, and there are so many new colors primarily because the fabrics are so wonderful in texture, soft as kitten fur, lending themselves with grace to the feminized more intricately detailed treatments which distinguish the new suit silhouettes and tailoring.

The most important changes in suit effectiveness are the above-the-waist ease much of which is gained through underarm fullness. Slim hips are retained, strategically, without "straight and narrow" skirts—for there is fashion news in skirts alone! They're fitted in front box, double box and side and kick treatments; they're bias pleated; and pleated all around. No American woman is going to give up her suit this winter; she'll select it with full intent of wearing it right through the season, under her fur coat.

Suit "characters in the order of their appearance" on the list of fashion-importants, place the three piece suits, both fur trimmed and untrimmed. Their silhouettes are classically straight or fitted, first. Because they provide a topcoat which can be worn for many occasions, they represent a sound investment for the woman with a limited clothes budget.

The two piece suit puts in an appearance in two distinctly different moods. It is either dressy, or casual. Fabric, color and silhouette provide the distinguishing characteristics—but in all instances there is some treatment, such as yoke fullness, ornamentation, and the introduction of set-in hips.

The boy's suit in three button styling, draped to suggest figure contours in the front, casually fitted at the back, will probably be the one most girls and women will buy this fall, because it catches the very spirit of our way of living in its trim good looks and practical wearability. Newest are collar treatments of this silhouette, either conventionally notched like a boy's jacket, or in longer point, bubbly styling like the collar of a shirt.

Lively colors are no longer reserved for spring and summer wear, say the new suits! And by way of proof they take to soft prettiness largely achieved through sueded and hair surfaces.
