Knocking on Wood

with JOHN H. HARWOOD

CENSORSHIP

The Navy has decided to change its mind about keeping the presence of British warships here a "strict secret," news dispatches from Washington reveal. It's an intelligent move; at least, it was certainly unimaginative to ask newsmen to suppress the presence of a warship in a certain harbor when the ship lay there in full view of every passerby on shore.

Another ridiculous aspect is the prohibition of picture-taking in public places such as docks and waterfronts. The prohibition, if it is any rule, wants to get information, all the while it is to keep the public from knowing what is going on. Who wants to walk around like anybody else and make notes, or have notes made?

People seem to have the quaint notion that the little black box with the lens and shutter sees all and is able to write down every human eye in much more effective. Wasn't it just last week that a couple of Chinese taking pictures at a Pontiac factory, a public area, were chased off? What could they find out that thousands of Pontiac people don't already know?

George Grosz was a censor during the First World War, gave his conclusions in an issue of Collier's some months ago. He was asked why he had left Germany and become a cartoonist in America. He said that the job they did had in 1917-18; the only real way to keep military secrets is to make sure they are never secret. His source of information is his own recollection of his views. Beyond that, further restrictions are of little value.

We Don't Listen

Unfortunately, some of the lessons learned during the First World War are being overlooked. In 1917-18, 1920 caused damage to this country by the combined efforts of German spies and saboteurs. Bernard Baruch and others, however, their warnings but nobody seems to pay a great deal of attention. Price control is a must on our list of things that need to be done.

Reaction

A Russian collapse may be the push needed to go much further into the war. People's houses have been burned by the Red resistance; as the Soviets lose more territory, the psychological reaction on the American mind. Fear of Hitler will begin to rise again, and those who are anxious that we declare an all-out self-defense will make the good fit.

A Small Army?

There's much talk of a "small" highly-mechanized and a highly-trained American army of a million or so regulars. Walter Lipmann is for it on the grounds that

You Should Hear Dr. Buell

One of the best informed men in America, on the subject of the United States and its relation to the world of today, is coming to Birmingham Monday evening, October 6. He will speak at the Community House, under the auspices of the Birmingham League of Women Voters.

The man's name is Raymond Leslie Buell, and he has gained international renown as director of Fortune Magazine's Round Table. One of the most travelled of human beings, constantly "on the go" today, he has gathered information about this confused world that is not only interesting; it is vitally important to adults in making up their minds on questions before us at the very moment.

It is really a great opportunity for our citizens to see and hear a very important person. So we suggest that you plan to attend this lecture; tell your friends about it, even those in other nearby areas.

Dr. Buell attracts large audiences wherever he goes; his radio followers number millions. So, may we suggest that you keep Monday evening, October 6, at 8:30 o'clock, prominently before you?

News Reports Were Meager

We cannot quite agree in totto, with some newspaper men who express the belief that despite foreign censorship, the people of this country have been acquainted with developments in Europe.

Certainly, it is well known that correspondents in Germany and Italy had the exercise of ample opportunity to report news. Elmer E. Rauh, however, claims that what is going on is the greatest source of disunity in the nation today; hence, if the people could be reminded of the promises made by Roosevelt, he could help Mr. Roosevelt's campaign promises again, things might be different.

We can agree on aid to the armed forces, but not on the fact that this nation ought to concentrate on itself. If we get deeper into a shooting war, our people are going to demand that our government do more to help us. And that will take supplies away from the various fronts where they are badly needed. Of course, we can do everything abroad; that would be very foolish, but soon, we will be building war machines faster than Germany or any other country could bring them to market.

Moreover, as we reflect upon the news reports that have come to this country from the totalitarian areas, we cannot believe that the full import of the amazing policies of repression have been completely presented to American readers. There is no way to understand the failure of some Americans to comprehend the significance of the present world struggle.

The brutality of Hitler's campaign against those who opposed him, his oppression of religious minorities and his rigorous persecution of the Jews have been mentioned but not underscored as they would have been in the absence of Germany's control of news leaving Germany.

Amazing Facts From A Spy Trial

The people of the United States are naturally interested in the work of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and will doubt be fascinated by details of the trial of sixteen spies now underway in the Federal Courtroom in Brooklyn, New York.

Among the revelations brought to light is the fact that in 1938 an American citizen, who had served as a machine-gunner in the German Army during the World War, was forced to become a spy while in Germany. Upon return to the United States, he revealed all facts to the Government.

As a result, the FBI built a short-wave station to establish communications with the German spy-ring at Hamburg. For sixteen months, the German exchanged worthless "information" about American defense plans for valuable details of the Nazi spy activities in this country.

It will also come as a shock to the people of this country to be informed that, in the opinion of G-men, the Germans have been in possession of our valuable Norden bombsight for many months. It will be remembered that quite a furor was created in this country at the mere suggestion that the bombsight had been given to the British air force.

The question however, is this: were the Isolationsists and neutrals, working with each other to protect our "great military secret"? Now comes the revelation that it was no secret at all in Berlin where complete details had been delivered by an employee of the plant making the bombsight in this country.

'Out of the Air'

By RADIO JAKE

The semi-annual shuffle of radio programs takes place at midnight Saturday and Sunday and there is more to your favorite show than will be an hour in the Detroit area. Turn your daily listings carefully for a while.

Everybody is wondering where Tom Harmon will score this fall. He has been invited to play in the Michigan State game from Ann Arbor Saturday. Our guess is he'll come through as usual.

The question however, is this: will he be a
