

Chapman Says Conflict in Education Caused by 2 Different Philosophies

Some of the problems confronting the elementary and secondary public school systems were told to Birmingham Rotarians Monday evening at the annual meeting when Lloyd G. Chapman, in charge of social and personnel work for the state department of education, was introduced by Rotarian Oscar F. Peterson.

Mr. Chapman, who has been in charge of the Birmingham recreation program since last year, pointed out that just as in the manufacture of various commodities, the manufacturer of a product must see to it that the product is of the highest quality, so in the case of education, the manufacturer of a product must see to it that the product is of the highest quality.

He said that the two main causes of the conflict in education are the two different philosophies that are being followed. One is the old philosophy under which the child is regarded as a blank slate, and the other is the new philosophy under which the child is regarded as a being with a mind of his own.

Mr. Chapman said that the old philosophy is based on the idea that the child is a blank slate, and that the teacher's job is to fill it with knowledge. The new philosophy is based on the idea that the child is a being with a mind of his own, and that the teacher's job is to guide him in the use of his mind.
