ELECTRIC POWER
for Industry

Last February 9th, the nation advanced its clocks and watches one full hour "for the duration." Properly ask us—What has the adoption of War Time meant in actual saving of electric power?

The huge turbo-generator you see above produces seventy-five thousand kilowatts of electricity—enough to take care of all the electric service requirements for a quarter of a million average families. A single one of these machines, complete, costs one-and-a-half million dollars, not counting transmission or distribution equipment to handle the current it produces. These great generators are put "on the line" as needed to meet peak-load requirements for electric power. Prior to February 9th, in the late afternoon, the demand for electricity from our power plants began to rise rapidly as lights were turned on, and electric ranges started cooking the evening meal. This simultaneous demand for power—from homes, stores, and factories—resulted in a high "peak" load, because lighting and cooking came together.

Since February 9th—after the nation changed to War Time—lights are turned on later. The home lighting load has been separated from the commercial lighting and cooking load, and fewer machines like the one above are needed to meet the evening "peak." It is estimated that our evening 30-minute peak has been reduced 50,000 to 75,000 kilowatts by the change to War Time. This releases valuable generating capacity needed by industry for the manufacture of war materials. Incidentally, The Detroit Edison Company's total generating capacity is now 55% times greater than at the close of World War I. The Detroit Edison Company.

HOOPER LEAVING

Scouts and Scouters are realizing more and more every day the seriousness of our present national emergency. A couple of the Scout leaders have already been drafted and most of the remaining ones have their numbers slated to come up in the near future.

B-4 will suffer a big loss this Wednesday when Bill Hooper, their able Scoutmaster, will leave for Boston to assume duties as a major in the Army. Born in Athens, Georgia, Mr. Hooper attended the University of Georgia there. He served in the last war as a lieutenant, training college men for military service.

He moved to Birmingham about eight years ago and has lived here since. During this time, he has kept the troop on its toes and is responsible for its 14 being among the leaders these past two years.

Along with Fred Zoellin, who is leaving for the installation of an emergency service corps, and when it was finally brought about, he was called into service.

Mr. Hooper was the manager of the Detroit office of the Retail Credit Company. We are sure that he will not regret the loss too much since he will be serving his country and after all, that's what counts.—Don McLeese.

AT CAMP BABBITT
So that the boys could have a chance to pass their outdoor tests, the Emergency Service Corps spent last week-end at Camp Babbitt, a 60-acre site located near Lake Orion. The group of ten left from Fred Zoellin's house about 3:30 Saturday afternoon.

When they arrived at camp, some of the boys pitched the two tents and they took over their outdoor tests. The evening meal, supper wasn't ready until about 8:30 due to the distance that the boys had to go to get the water. However, everyone agreed that it was well worth waiting for. After the supper dishes were washed, the group went into Orion for some ice cream and went to bed when they returned.

Sunday, a rope was put up after the cars had been loaded to give the boys a chance to pass their rope-climbing test. Albert Hirsch proved to be the only one who is the first person to complete all his requirements for this organization. Congratulations, Al!

Following this bit of exercise, the group left for home. Those in the group were as follows: the leader, Fred Zoellin, Sr., Fred Zoellin, Jr., Bill Hooper, Albert Hirsch, Elmer Giles, Ralph Corvett, Tom Mittlebrandt, Don Flynn, Fletcher Plant, and Don McLeese.

Rep. George A. Dondoro, who has represented the 17th Congressional District of Michigan since its creation in 1932, this week announced his intention to seek reelection on the Republican ticket.

Under the procedure followed in the House of Representatives for its organization, committee assignments and ranking are based upon seniority attained by continuous service. Like all other newly elected Representatives, Rep. Dondoro started at the bottom when the people of the 17th District first sent him to Congress. Today by reason of his uninterrupted period of service, he is the ranking member of the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, in which he ranks near the top, has won national recognition.

Throughout the recent hearings on the St. Lawrence Seaway, Rep. Dondoro's interrogation of witnesses appearing before the Committee on Rivers and Harbors was instrumental in bringing out much essential information on the project. His work on the Seaway, the lock at the Soo and the improvement of the Southeast Bend in the St. Clair River has definitely contributed to the defense effort of the Nation. In his efforts in behalf of the St. Lawrence Seaway he has cooperated with the President and Assistant Secretary of State A. A. Berle.
