Picturesque Rites Unite Jeanne Shuell, Ensign Wolf

Wearing bridal robes of ivory taffeta, Jeanne W. Shuell walked down the aisle of St. Bartholomew's Church in New York City, last Saturday evening, on the arm of her father, Frank W. Shuell, to become the bride of Ensign George Wheeler Wolf, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. George Wheeler Wolf of Green Farms, Conn.

The Rev. Robert W. Woodruff, formerly of Christ Church Cranbrook read the nuptial service before an altar banded with ferns, white gladioli and madonna lilies, and lighted by cathedral candles.

Heirloom Veil
Jeanne's gown was made of a full skirt, and a tight bodice, distinguished by an off-the-shoulder type neckline, and long fitted sleeves. A Juliet cap of rose points lace held her veil of similar material in place—both the cap and veil being heirlooms in the Wolf family. Her bridal bouquet was of white camellias.

Barbara Shuell, maid of honor for her sister, wore a dress of gold taffeta, similar to the bridal gown, except for short sleeves. Her large picture hat of gold horsehair was trimmed with a band of green velvet ribbon which hung in streamers down her back and she wore a green spray of orchids. Patsy Shull, another sister, acted as bridesmaid, and was dressed exactly like the bride, except for the late Mr. Mellan.
