Plenty of Land Usable in State

Michigan's 37,000,000 acres, including a million covered by inland waters, still offer a million acres of potentially first class farm land not now being farmed, reports J. O. Veatch, soils professor at Michigan State College.

From his activity in testing and mapping Veatch concludes that the state's agriculture can boast, along with industry, of its capacity for wartime production.

Here is his picture of land use at present: Farms now have 8,800,000 acres of first class agricultural land, 10,300,000 acres of second class and 18 million acres of third and fourth class land. Then there is the extra million acres of first class land potentially available.

"Amounts of untilled second and third class arable land is so great," says Veatch, "there is little prospect of more than a small part of it being used for cultivated crops in the near future."

Michigan is confronted with a tremendous problem in land utilization. None of the land, according to Veatch, is literally worthless, waste or poor. Not all of the land can be used for farm crops. Classification and planning studies should be continued, Veatch maintains, to discover the most profitable and rational use for all land. From a social point of view, he says, the use of a large part of Michigan's land for forestry and recreation is logical.

U. of M. Classes Begin on Feb. 9

University of Michigan extension classes in Detroit, more than 50 of which are being offered for the second semester, will be held in the classrooms of the University's section of the new Horace H. Rackham Educational Memorial Building which was formally opened on January 28. Classes will open the week of February 9, instead of February 16, as originally planned, in order that the extension schedule may coincide with that of the campus.

Information about next semester's courses may be had at the Extension office, 60 Farnsworth, telephone Temple 2-7400. Bulletins will be available there to persons not on the regular mailing list and may be obtained also at the Detroit Public Library and its branches.

Waste Metal Sought For Defense Use

LANSING—Lying idle in Michigan backyards, attics and cellars, there are potential guns, cartridges, tanks, and important parts of great bombing planes, Lieut. Col. Harold A. Furlong, administrator of the Michigan Council of Defense declared.

Uncovering and returning of this huge reservoir of critically needed material into war production is the task the recently-named salvage committee of the MCD has set for itself. Current and impending shortages in most of the metals used in the manufacture of weapons of all kinds have brought the importance of salvaging so-called waste materials into the forefront as one of the most vital immediate war problems, Kenneth M. Burns, Detroit banker, who is chairman of the salvage committee, said.

Fort Knox, Ky.,—Enlisted men of the Armored Force wear overcoats approximately twice as heavy as those worn by the average civilian. Part of the $112 wardrobe for each man of the Armored Force is a 10-pound overcoat.

Detroit Symphony Plans Big Week

The greatest single week of orchestral concerts in the history of Detroit, involving the donated services of seven world-famous artists, will be played by the Detroit Symphony Orchestra during the last week of February in Masonic Auditorium, according to Dr. Fred T. Murphy, president of the Detroit Symphony Society.

Three mammoth nationalistic concerts, to be known as the Allied Music Festival will be played Tuesday, Feb. 24, Thursday, Feb. 26 and Saturday, Feb. 28. The first program will be all-British with Alec Templeton, pianist, and Dorothy Maynor, soprano, as soloists, and with Victor Kolar as conductor. The second program will be all-Russian with Albert Spalding, violinist, as soloist, and with Efrem Kurtz, musical director of the Monte Carlo Ballet Russe, as conductor. The third program will be all-American with Oscar Levant, pianist, as soloist, and with Andre Kostelanetz as conductor.

The purpose of the festival is to raise $25,000 with which to meet the current season's deficit of the orchestra.

that incipient tuberculosis is much more easily cured than moderately advanced cases, yet only 15 percent of the tuberculosis found in Oakland County was in the early stages? An adequate number of nurses in this area could have found a much larger percentage of these cases in the beginning of the disease, and thus have saved the taxpayer thousands of dollars.
