Nora Alfs Wears Old Fashioned Gown For Marriage to Kurt M. Herzfeld

Looking very much as if she had just stepped out of the family album, Nora Alfs, garbed in an old-fashioned wedding gown of white dotted swiss, became the bride of Kurt M. Herzfeld at a ceremony performed Saturday afternoon at Christ Church Cranbrook. The Rev. Otis Berkeley, of Detroit, read the services before an altar simply decorated with white lilies, glads and stock.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Alfs, of West Long Lake road, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Herzfeld, of Lyons, N. Y.

The bridal gown, fashioned of white dotted swiss, was made with hoop skirt having a full ruffle at the hem. A heart-shaped neckline and three-quarter-length sleeves edged in ruffles, distinguished the fitted bodice. Complementing her ensemble was a white poke bonnet with a short veil down her back to the waistline. Instead of a bouquet she carried a small white prayer book tied with white prograin streamers decorated with white Stephanotis and carnations. Susan Hartman, the only attendant, wore a white dress with sleeves edged with ruffles, and a round neck. Her hair was styled in white dotted swiss cap and carried pink roses and blue delphinium.

Janet Hawkins, of Boston, Mass., was best man, and seating the guests were Alfred Alfs, Robert Hall, Robert E. Wolfe, William Graham, Robert Aggrove, and Roland Bordin. Mr. Alfs gave his daughter away in marriage.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Alfs wore a dress of a chalk white and green print crepe and white accessories. Mrs. Herzfeld was dressed in dark blue crepe, with white accessories. Both had corsages of gardenias.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Alfs opened their home for a wedding reception. Later on the young couple left for Baltimore, Md., where they will make their home. For traveling the bride wore a brown linen suit with natural linen accessories.

MRS. TURNER A. DUNCAN, of Hupp Cross road, left yesterday for Washington, D. C., where she will join her husband. They plan to leave immediately from there for a week's vacation at Virginia Beach, Va.
