U of M Style Show Features 'On and Off Duty' Fashions

The war-time styles are most attractive as agreed by some 275 women attending the bridge tea and style show at the Community House Tuesday afternoon. The party is an annual one, sponsored by the Birmingham U of M Alumnae League for benefit of scholarship students at the University.

Dealing with everything new in spring styles, much of the show was devoted to slacks suits. One particularly good looking suit was made with blue twill tailored trousers and a jacket of small blue and brown checks. A white twill jacket worn over slacks caused a great deal of comment as did two other outfits well suited for wear in a suburban community. The first was a pair of blue and white checked slacks, riding worn with a bright red shirt and hose, and the other was a blue denim garden's suit.

There is no SUBSTITUTE for HEALTH

You either have good health or you haven't. You can't go to the store and buy a substitute for it.
