

Simpler Styles Best Bet in War

Good clothes, cut on simple styles, will remain in style for the duration.

That's the promise of Merle Ford, head of the Michigan State College department of textiles, clothing and related arts of the home economics division.

There may be narrower skirts, no full sleeves, pockets or collars and the seams and hem may be narrower and jackets and skirts shortened by the war emergency affecting women's clothes. Manufacturers are asked to reduce the amount of goods put in many garments.

"Even though the War Production Board does set limitations on the amount of goods used in any one garment, our clothing need not have a deadly monotony," comments Miss Ford.

"One definite contribution the government restrictions seek is to obtain 16 per cent more garments out of the fabric that is to be cut for new clothing for women."

Out of the emergency Miss Ford expects to see some actual contributions to future styling of women's clothes. "One immediate effect likely will be the clothes designed to promote efficiency on the job, clothes made from materials that will remain in good condition with a minimum of care, and made of materials exceedingly durable.

Modern stylings laugh at the "fanny old shoes" and the limitations set on corsets stays in World War I. Yet the style for those went out with that war period and didn't return, which gives Miss Ford reason to assume that the present emergency may bring out desirable style trends in women's clothes.

Hungarian Partridges Released Again

MASON—Continuing the search for combinations of soil and cover conditions in which Hungarian partridge will take a permanent "root," conservation department game men have made two additional experimental releases in which a total of 240 "bunkies" was liberated.

Ninety mated pairs of gamefowl reared "bunkies" were released in Delta township of Ingham county three miles southeast of Grand Lake, on what is known as the Frank Fitzgerald farm.

Thirty additional pairs procured from a private game farm in Connecticut were released in Ingham county between Mason and Leslie in the vicinity of one of last year's plantings. How to Make Bleach at Home

If you use a bleach in the family wash you can easily make Javelle water at home.

To Make Javelle Water:
1 lb. chloride of lime dissolved in 2 quarts cold water.
1 lb. washing soda dissolved in 1 quart boiling water.

Pour the clear liquid from the chloride of lime into the soda solution. Let the mixture settle and then strain the liquid through a cloth into a bottle. Cork and keep in a dark place. This makes good bleach for white material. When used for stains soak in equal quantity of bleach and hot water until the stain disappears, then rinse thoroughly in several waters and finally in dilute ammonia water (1 tablespoon ammonia to 2 quarts water).
