

THIS AND THAT

I've been reading your paper for ever longer than you've been publishing it, and today, for the first time since you started your "This and That" column, we agree.

For all these years I grab your paper, get into a Boris Karloff in the back than to deal with me this way.

and take all the digs as personal insults and then fly into a rage. I guess I've become so accustomed to this Thursday morning ritual that I find myself unable to do without it.

School Leaders Address Clubs

The job of the armed forces is to fight the battles; that of industry to furnish supplies and machines; while the schools must educate for war and also for peace to follow.

However, general education is not being abandoned. "Young people must be capable of implementing the freedoms which we now seek to safeguard," he pointed out.
