

Rep. Dondero Explains Recent Vote On Cost of Labor in Farm Prices

(Editor's note—During the session in the House of Representatives, there were several votes on amendments in which many newspapers' correspondents said that Congressmen bowed to the bidding of the farm bloc, ignoring the inflationary trend which might result. Rep. George A. Dondero was one of those who voted to include "cost of labor" in farm prices, so The Eccentric asked him to explain his position. His statement follows):

"I voted for the original Price Control Bill after all amendments to provide equality of control for agriculture, labor and industry were eliminated.

"The bill to amend the Price Control Act on which the House of Representatives voted last week provides a guarantee to labor of a 15% increase in wages or salary paid as of Jan. 1, 1941. It does not accept wage paid to labor above that amount.

Says Not Inflationary "There was no such guarantee given to the farmer and it does not take into consideration the cost of labor as a factor in the cost of what the farmer produces. Everyone knows that the present wage standards in this country are the principal factor of cost. The high cost of living. It is not the farmer. Prices Analyzed "This is not an inflationary bill. A suit of clothes contains about three pounds of wool.

"If we are to prevent uncontrolled inflation of food prices, we must prevent a scarcity of food. To prevent a scarcity of food, we must pay the farmer a fair and reasonable price for his crops, and any price to be reasonable and fair must include the cost of production, which includes the cost of labor. Food is the first essential to the winning of the war."
