Commitments That Fashion Destiny

(Editor's Note—This is the last of a series written by the Rev. W. Glen Harris, based on a six-week visit to the Central Institute of Science in Bloomfield Hills this fall. It will be taught by Walter P. Nickell, naturalist on the institute staff. Meetings will be held from 9 a. m. to noon on Saturdays from Sept. 20 through Nov. 14.)

Events of the present usually issue from commitments of the past. Many a good man is limited for good because he has committed himself to evil in the past...

Paul's Vow The Apostle Paul experienced a distinct crisis of his life at Corinth and it was due to a commitment made in the past that he came through victoriously. He was lonely. His funds were exhausted...

The shadow of former commitments falls across the grim reality of a modern world. The events of the present issue from the commitments of the past. We have committed ourselves and our resources to the idea that might is right...

The sacred narrative tells us that many in Jerusalem "believed in his name, while they saw the miracles which he did." They were willing to accept Jesus as a worker of miracles, but they did not trust him as Master and Lord...

The course of world events since 1940 has called attention to one man in particular, Adolf Hitler. He was the son of a clogmaker and began the study for the ministry. He became disgusted with the hypocrisy and moral pretensions of Christianity...

It events today issue from commitments of the past. The events of tomorrow will issue from the commitments of today. Herein lies the responsibility of the church. Herein rests the most glorious opportunity that the church has ever faced.
