STANTON

Months, but a cheery disposition, which came that way through almost a century of practice, remained until the last.

The Rev. Warner C. Forsyth read the Episcopal service in rites at the Manly Bailey Funeral Home...

Stanton was an honorary member, too, of the National Exchange Club, and was a charter member of the Chicago and North Branch Rotary Club.

“In a South Carolina, Colonel Forsyth later became a Kentucky colonel,” he used to explain.

Stanton was born at St. George, Ont., near Galt, on July 12, 1849, and he recalled that he was a “delicate” boy.

He was active in Chicago, and became a member of the Union League Club for more than 40 years.

Stanton is survived by his son, Henry Ford Stanton, with whom he made his home, and three grandchildren, Robert L. Stanton, of Springdale, Calif., Mrs. Eric Pfeiffer, of Springfield, Mo., and Margaret H. Stanton, of Birmingham.

PARACHUTE

First, we loaded in the plane and flew for about two hours. The exchange on an airport that was ‘friendly,’ and then took off again and flew for about one hour.

“Then we went on and took the air for less than one hour. On the way back, we rode in planes aloft. I sat right by the door for a while. Going over, we flew at 150 feet, jumped at 600 feet and flew at 3,000 feet coming back.
