Illilage ariety

By CONSTANCE LEWIS. There is one outstanding benefit in this whole military experience and that is my association with the men who live and die in airplanes. They are a special type of individual, somehow, and it is very uplifting to live with them. Life itself is so secondary and valueless in these men that it certainly puts me to thinking.

War Unexpected. There was little they could say about Russia or Belgium there is no news that comes out of there now. "All I can say is that I love Belgium with all my heart because I was brought up and educated and met my husband there. When we were in college a month before the outbreak of the war, we had no idea that war was coming. Of course, we were talking about the next one and after the Munich conference, Europe was never of talking about war and about their minds to it," Mrs. Hills stated.

Both Doing Part. Although she is not another country and her husband has lived a good deal of his life abroad, they are both doing their part. Mrs. Hills is fighting on the battle front and his wife is fighting on the production front, so between them they are doing their part to bring about peace in America and Europe.

James McBride Succumbs at 92. James McBride, 556 West Frank street, died at his residence Monday following a long illness. He was 92 years old.

Prussianism's Black History. The result has been that, over the last 20 years, the Prussianism has cost the lives of at least 20 million men who have caused the nations of the world to squander hundreds of billions of dollars on death, destruction and hate. How different things would have been if this money had been spent instead on peace, prosperity and understanding.

100-Octane Gas Really a Mixture

America's commanding role in the production of aviation gasoline results primarily from the research and development undertaken by the oil industry in recent years. In the early 1930's, 100 octane gasoline was little more than a last tube curiosity, and it cost $25 a gallon.

One hundred octane gasoline contains three principal ingredients: a base stock of 70 to 80 octane rating, a blending stock which raises the octane to about 85, and ethyl fluid which brings it up to 100. Approximately one quarter liquid ounce of ethyl is required per gallon. What does this super-fuel do for a plane? Compare an engine designed for 100 octane with one using 91. Other things being equal, the engine fueled by 100 octane gas will develop about 25% more power at the takeoff, or maintain maximum flying speed at about 1,500 feet higher altitude. And it will require less fuel on any given trip.
