Survey of State Scrap Needs Discloses Lack of Steel, Iron

In a recent survey of Michigan's scrap situation, John D. McGillis, secretary of the state salvage division, disclosed today that Michigan's share of the iron and steel scrap quota is 1,180,000 tons for the six month period ending Dec 31, 1943. This has increased over 79,000 tons over the first six months of the year. Although Michigan has produced its quota before it will probably be more difficult to produce the same tonnage, let alone the additional amount, Mr. McGillis said.

"Although the national inventory is adequate for production purposes, great concern has been expressed by WPB officials and industry spokesmen as to whether or not we can acquire a sufficient reserve to see us through next winter," McGillis continued. "But it must be clear to all that the farmer and others will have to be on the lookout for scrap."

County quotas have not yet been established. They will no doubt be lower than in the past, with proper consideration for previous pickups.

Fat Collections Low

Oakland County, in line with the entire state, tumbled in July in the waste fats collection. Henry Jansen, county chairman, disclosed that the county collection totaled 32,838 pounds, failing to meet the quota of 36,618 pounds. Mr. McGillis said that before this month the state had climbed steadily to 60.4 percent of the quota in June. Oakland County topped its June quota by 2,000 pounds.

McGillis attributed this shortage to the time of year but said that authorities had hoped the larger number of housewives participating fats would make up the difference.

The state secretary continued that the waste paper shortage was definitely a serious one. "Paper is needed now," he said, "although we are confident that when paper now being saved begins to reach the market, there will be some relief, but the shortage exists now. Waste paper consumption far exceeds the receipts threatening the paper industry as well as production," McGillis said.

No Formal Canvass

No formal house to house collection is to take place in this locality but citizens are urged by O. Lee Beaudette, county salvage chairman, to give them to charitable organizations, or sell them if they wish.

Mr. McGillis concluded that the situation varies considerably with the nonferrous metals. Brass mills are working at capacity at present but copper refineries are in need of scrap. A copper drive is still held in abeyance and will be asked for only if absolutely needed.

Rare Tropical Poison Unavailable, Halting Fish Killing Project

ANN ARBOR — Unavailability of the rare tropical poison used by the Department of Conservation's Institute for Fisheries Research in cleaning out lakes containing undesirable fish preparing them to be re-stocked with healthy trout has forced the Institute to suspend for the duration this phase of its program of "making" new trout lakes.

War closed the commercial sea lanes which brought this poison to Michigan from the East Indies, and although a substitute exists in South America, curtailing shipping space and diversion to army use has made this supply equally unavailable.

Since the discovery of this method of reclaiming lakes containing stunted fish or undesirable fish populations, by Michigan research men in 1934, about 30 small deep-water lakes have been poisoned out and restocked with brook or rainbow trout.

This widely publicized discovery of Michigan research men is now considered past the experimental stage, and department officials declare that the technique is now fully developed, and the program will be resumed in full force after the war.

Add Salt to Drinking Water

When perspiring freely, workers should plan to consume from one-eighth to one-fourth teaspoonful of salt for each glass of drinking water. This helps to maintain the salt balance of the body, explain foods and nutritional specialists at Michigan State college.
