Every District To Be Covered By Large Force

To assist Birmingham in the 1943 Victory Book Campaign, members of neighboring towns and communities met on Tuesday to complete their organization. The local drive to collect books for the armed services part of the national campaign, centers in the Birmingham Library, under the direction of Lindo Moore. Addressing the meeting of chairmen, which took place in the library, Mrs. Moore stated that the drive started Feb. 1 and will continue throughout the month. "This year we want to emphasize quality rather than quantity," said Mrs. Moore. "These books are recognized by our military leaders as part of our fighting equipment, whether as a source of morale or information. To be effective as such they should be books the boys want to read, such as current best sellers, mysteries, western, and humorous books, or up-to-date scientific books and textbooks. And please do emphasize, "only books in good condition!"
