Consumers' Manager ART

She said, too, that while a tentative schedule is already set up, the staff of the library cannot make really definite plans until they actually see the class and talk with the young girls.

A life-long resident of Birmingham Mrs. Thurber has for many years given private lessons in her own home and this, supplemented by the antics of her ten, lively, young grandchildren, has combined to give her a vital understanding of the young person's general outlook and interests.

She graduated from Pratt Institute in the normal art and manual training class, received a B. S. degree from Columbia University's Teachers' College and was awarded a diploma from the New York School of Interior Decoration.

Mrs. Ward has exhibited with the Southern Vermont Artists and at the Montclair, New Jersey, Art Museum. She also exhibited with the Michigan Artists in Detroit.

All work at first to be done with colored crayons. A little later, however, the older children who show an especial talent will try their hand at watercolors.

Compositions will be those of special interest for children: planes and zepps, fishing boats, flowers, trees, trains, lake boats, a circus with elephants and stores. Living models will also be used.

This arts and crafts program will continue on the playgrounds for the next six weeks. All boys and girls are urged to take part.
