NUTRITION In War Time

Milk—The Most Nearly Perfect Food

Milk may properly be called a miracle food, containing as it does an almost complete diet in itself. In these days of many hastily eaten meals, shortages and sometimes limited choice, it is more important than ever that both adults and children should have their daily quota of milk—one pint or more for an adult and one quart or more for a child.

Contains Vitamins and Minerals

One pint or more of milk a day will give an adult one-fourth of the protein needed for body building; one-fourth of the daily need of fats; Vitamin A to give resistance against infection; Vitamins B-1 and B-2 essential for normal body functioning and nutrition; and smaller quantities of Vitamins D, E and K. It also contains a good supply of calcium and phosphorus for making bones and teeth. For a child, the quart or more of milk each day will promote growth in addition to what it does for an adult.

No one could maintain normal health and strength on a diet of milk alone for any great length of time, but it comes closer to supplying all the nutrients we need than any other one food.

Milk is not rationed, and in comparison with other foods of comparative value, it is low in cost.

Milk As a Beverage

Whole milk is excellent as a beverage. Skimmed milk is also very good, and the only ingredient that skimmed milk does not contain is Vitamin A. This can be had from butter, fortified margarine, green and yellow vegetables.

To give milk a different flavor add two or three teaspoonfuls of strained honey or canned fruit juice to one glass of cold milk. Adults as well as children will like this.

You Can Eat Milk, Too

Some people do not drink milk as a beverage. If not, it should be had with other foods. Milk is an important ingredient with scores of nourishing and delicious dishes and you get benefit from eating it in cheese and cooked foods.

You can use milk in a salad . . . cottage cheese combined with your favorite garden vegetable or with fruit.

Use milk in entrees—souffles, casseroles and cream sauces.

Use milk in desserts—custards, puddings and ice cream.

PROTECT WILD BEES

Bees are vital war workers and essential not only in honey production but in fruit and field crop pollination, according to R. H. Kelty, Michigan State College extension beekeeper. Farmers are urged to maintain colonies and even observe certain practices that will give aid and protection to wild bees. The latter can be protected if burning or clearing out fence rows is curbed. Even a rail fence protects wild bee colonies. Insecticides, fires, plowing up acreage not needed, or poor weather are factors that tend to curb bee population useful to legume crops and fruit.

Pail Faces

Everybody pitches in on the Leo J. Rexing farm, Vanderburg county, Indiana. Here's farmer Rexing, left, and four of his 10 children in action on the dairy farm: Ralph, 11; Henry, 9; Joseph, 17; Cletus, 19. They extract 144,000 pounds of milk annually from a 19-cow herd.

Blood Bank Coming

The mobile blood bank unit of Detroit is making a change in its policy. It will no longer tour outlying districts for daily bleedings. The unit will only visit communities which can accommodate them for several days. This will save the staff both time and effort as the setting up of the vast equipment necessary, requires many hours of labor. Therefore all Southern Oakland County will consolidate and meet at a given point. Royal Oak Methodist Church at 6th and Washington streets will be host to the Mobile Unit Monday, July 26, through Friday, July 30. Donors will be taken between 2:30 and 7:30 p. m. I will continue as chairman of Southfield Township; Mrs. L. J. Golcar is assistant chairman. Cards will be sent out within a few days.

COLLISION OCCURS

Automobiles driven by Mrs. Marian Ellis Eynon, 1713 Pine avenue, and A. Sturman, 505 Bryn Mawr, collided Thursday at 1 p.m. at 137 West Maple, according to a report filed with police. Damage to Mrs. Eynons car was listed as $40.

Walnut Timber Needed for War

"Owners of walnut trees of adequate size will do the nation, as well as themselves a service in offering them for sale at the present time due to the need for such wood in the production of gunstocks and to a lesser extent for aircraft propellers and plywood."

This is the statement of W. Ira Bull, state extension forester at Michigan State College, who points out that the prices paid for gunstock walnut are very good when compared with most woods. It was also explained that the products of the hardwood mill are governed in price by Office of Price Administration ceilings.

"The owner of walnut trees should be sure that the trees he offers have a top diameter of at least 12 inches inside the bark (or about 40 inches in diameter 4½ feet from the ground)," Mr. Bull said. "Smaller trees should not be cut at this time in the interest of conservation of natural resources, and further from the practical viewpoint that there is much more waste in a smaller tree. A 13-in trunk will produce three times as much usable lumber and be worth three times as much as a nine-inch tree."
