'Liberty Lobsters' With the submarine menace making lobster and shrimp rare and costly, the lowly fresh-water crab is becoming a delicacy on mid-western tables. Commercial fishermen on the Garden Peninsula in Lake Michigan are helping to solve the war-time food shortage by trapping these plebeian crayfish in wooden box traps and shipping them alive to distributing points in Green Bay and Milwaukee. About 2,000 crayfish, ranging from 2 1/2 to 6 inches in length, are shipped every day from Garden. Prepared in the same manner as shrimp or lobster, crayfish are served in salads or on the shell.
