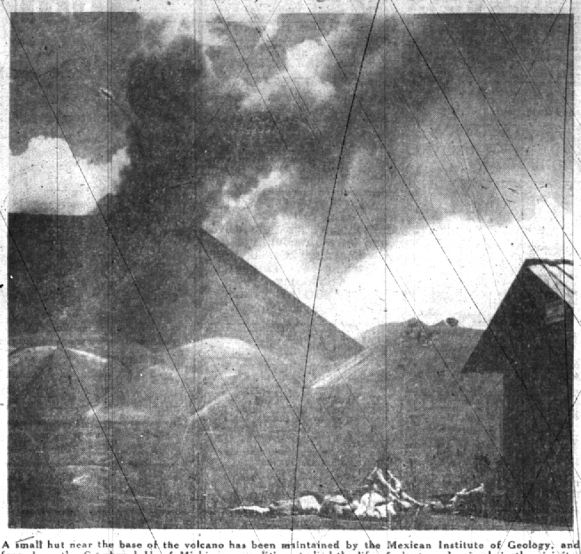
Cranbrook Party Pictures Scenes At Mexico's Newest And Active Volcano, El Paricutin, During Visit Of Scientists



A small hut near the base of the volcano has been maintained by the Mexican Institute of Geology, and from here the Cranbrook-U. of Michigan expedition studied the life of plants and animals in the vicinity. Dr. Hatt snapped three Tarascan boys resting at the left with Mrs. Hatt, Mr. A. N. Goddard and Dr. W. H. Burt.

Dr. Hatt Pictures Crushed Church

Dr. Robert T. Hatt, director of the Cranbrook Institute of Science, photographed the destruction of the hut at the left which was to have been used as expedition headquarters in the town of San Juan Parangaricutiro. The church was destroyed already except for its towers.

Climbing Through Volcanic Dust

Members of the expedition climbing up the side of the volcanic cone, a 30 degree slope, while hot rocks were falling about them. Size of the rocks thrown out varied from 30 feet long to tiny pebbles. Volcanic dust covers everything for more than 20 miles around. Distant house tops are swept off daily to avoid cave ins. Left to right, in the photo above, are Mrs. Hatt, Mr. J. Gonzalez of the Mexican Geological Institute and Dr. W. H. Burt. This photo was taken by Dr. Hatt.

endanger any other cities for several months.

Sees No Terror

"Indians were not crowding the highways nor fleeing in terror with hastily assembled possessions," said Dr. Hatt, "because the Mexican government had systematically moved the inhabitants of San Juan and their possessions to the distant town of Los Conejos. A few Indians continued to salvage doors and lumber from the deserted dwellings but such highway congestion as sometimes occurred was due to the numerous passenger cars, buses and trucks carrying tourists to see the spectacular but danger-free sight of slowly advancing lava."

No person has yet lost his life from action of the volcano, Dr. Hatt reported, though many have climbed the cone to look down into the throat of the volcano when molten rocks were being tossed out.

Oak trees were found still living within a mile of the volcano despite the accumulation of as much as ten feet of ash around them and the injurious weighting down of their branches with dust.

Many animals appeared loathe to leave their old haunts despite the absence of suitable food or cover. Foxes, mice, bluebirds, jays, towhees, ravens, and hummingbirds were present in completely desolated areas right around the cone. Moths and spiders were common at the base of the cone and were also found in the throat of a parasitic cone, Zapicho, which a few months ago was emitting great quantities of molten rock.

Seven Local Girls Enlist In WAVES

Doris Protherne, apprentice seaman in the Waves, and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Protherne of Hanna street, left yesterday for Hunter College in New York City to take her boot training.

A number of parties in her honor have taken place during the past two weeks. Among those who entertained for her were the H. H. Gardners, the Ward Chuckshanks and Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Burlington of Detroit. A group of girls friends had luncheon for her at Deson Gables.

The guests were Mary Ellen Hanks, Elaine Dewey, Gertrude Rossman, Marilyn Jeavons, and Shirley Cummades. The same group of girls were entertained at Shirley Chamberlain's home and also at Marilyn McIntyre's.

Doris is one of a group of Birmingham girls who have been sworn into the Waves and will be leaving soon to begin their training. Other new recruits are Nancy Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Williams; Mary Blanchard, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. R. M. Blanchard; Mary Stafford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Stafford; Mary Jane Forester, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Forester; Catherine Bingham and Kathleen Dyke. Shirley Cummades reports to Smith College for officers training, while the other girls report to Hunter College in New York City.

OFFICES MOVED

Lawrence E. Smith, landscape architect, has moved his offices from 114 Peabody to the Wasbek building on this week.

GREETINGS!

The very mark of true friendship is one's thoughtfulness! And there is a certain "timing" to that thoughtfulness which either enhances or disturbs.

Let promptness be the guide. For promptness in the extension of greetings is the very first rule.

An increasing number of our customers are keeping selections of Norcross Greeting Cards in their writing desks—handy for prompt despatching when the occasion for sending "greetings" arises!

OFFICE IS ROBBED

The police department reports it is without clues as to who stole the money box from the safe in the office of Snyder, Buck and Bennett in the Birmingham theatre building last Thursday afternoon. The box is reported to have contained about $150 in cash and about $350 in checks. The safe is in the front office and the money box was stolen while the office was left unoccupied for a brief time.
