She is currently a member of the editorial board of the American Economic Review.

The lecture is sponsored by the Vassar Alumnae Association, American Association of University Women, and the League of Women Voters.

Serving on the committee are Mrs. Ralph Yonkers, East Long Lake road; Mrs. E. W. Averill, 419 Westwood Drive; Mrs. Hugh McLesse, 4275 Brookside; Mrs. Henry Graber, 1013 Biddenden; Mrs. George W. Patch, Lone Pine road; Mrs. Nell McMath, Lone Pine road; Mrs. Langdon Crane, 1389 Willon Lane.

DR. MABLE NEWCOMER

"Taxes and Inflation," a subject of such vital and immediate concern to every citizen, is the title of a lecture to be given by Dr. Mable Newcomer, one of the country's foremost authorities in this field, on Wednesday, January 26th, at 8:15 P.M. at the Birmingham Community House.

The speaker will be introduced by Dr. Jett D. Upson, director of the Detroit Bureau of Governmental Research and School of Public Affairs and Social Work at Wayne University. At the close of the lecture, Dr. Upson will lead a question and discussion period in which the audience will take part.

A subscription dinner to be the guest of honor will be served at the Community house at 7 P.M. preceding the lecture. All those who wish to attend will be welcome, and may make their reservations by calling the Community House, Birmingham 2406, before Saturday.

Miss Newcomer, chairman of the Department of Economics and Sociology at Vassar College, and one of its most popular professors, is recognized as one of the country's foremost authorities on taxation and government finance. She has a background of wide practical experience outside the college. She was chosen by Governor Dewey, immediately after his election, as one of his advisors on New York state taxes, and last year was granted a part time leave of absence from her teaching to serve on the special treasury committee on intergovernmental relations in Washington.

To prove that Miss Newcomer's knowledge is more than theoretical, Vassar points with pride to the record achieved by the faculty-trustee committee of which she is a member, in organizing the college curriculum on a three-year basis. Under the new war time plan, the Top kitchen shelves make convenient storage space for jams, jellies and preserves, but not proper storage to keep them in the best condition.

Now that these spreads are rationed, keeping them safe from spoilage is more important than before. The warm moist air that rises in the kitchen helps promote molds and fermentation. Heat may soften the paraffin or jelly enough to loosen the seal and let in spoilage organisms. Heat and light may fade the color and even affect the flavor. Like canned foods, the spreads keep best in cool dark dry storage.

A midwinter check-up may save the preserves from loss before the cook normally would get the jars down for table use. Look for sticky juice leaking from preserves, or a drop of bright juice on top of a paraffin layer, suggest members of the home economics extension service at Michigan State College.

Jelly can be resealed by removing the paraffin, wiping the inside of the top of the glass clean and dry and then pouring on enough hot paraffin to cover the jelly. The glass should be tipped slightly and rotated so the paraffin will run on all sides to form a tight seal.

The jelly itself cannot be reheated, since it would lose its consistency. Other spreads like jam, preserves or fruit butter may be reheated if care is taken not to scorch the product.

Any mold should first be removed and then the preserve heated in a double boiler just long enough to boil, then poured boiling into hot clean containers and sealed.

Will It Take Long?

"Your friend is getting along fine—he is convalescing now."

"Well I'll just sit down and wait till he's through."

Sees Need For Good Man As Health Head

Michigan's new director of public health, according to convictions of the National League of Women Voters, should be a high type medical man, conversant not only with normal peacetime health problems, but equally versed in the problems that will confront the State when men return from the current war.

This attitude was made known yesterday by Mrs. Ralph L. Yonkers, president of the Birmingham Branch of the League of Women Voters, who stated that every Branch in Michigan is exerting its influence to have Governor Harry F. Kelly appoint such a director. The League is requesting that the general public contact the governor, by telephone, letter, or telegram to bring this about.

The local League group's social welfare committee met with a similar committee of Christ Church Cranbrook, Tuesday, to discuss problems of current juvenile delinquency in Michigan; they went Governor Kelly's program to solve juvenile problems, and agreed that his program should be given support by the special legislative session which convenes January 31 in Lansing.

More Sharp-Tailed Grouse Are Brought To North Michigan

Birmingham bird hunters, and especially those who go to the northern part of the lower peninsula to hunt sharp-tailed grouse, are enthusiastic over a report from the conservation department in Lansing, today that shipment is expected soon of the first 200 pairs of wild-trapped sharp-tails ordered from Alberta, Canada, to plant in the northern part of the lower peninsula.

Although the sharp-tailed grouse is a relative newcomer to Michigan, it is well established in the northern peninsula and until last winter birds were live-trapped there and transplanted to the southern peninsula. This species is well adapted to Michigan winters and always seems to find enough food, no matter what the weather.

Wild birds have to be trapped because breeders have not been successful in raising this species. Sharp-tails can be trapped only in the winter months when they can be baited into feeding stations.

A total of 1,084 sharp-tails have been transplanted from southern Alberta and the northern peninsula since 1937. In some areas they have become established and are already providing hunting.
