Sees New Daughter First Time When His Carrier Docks

As assistant operations officer aboard an aircraft carrier supporting the Normandy invasion, there was never any lack of excitement for Lt. George M. Rounds, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. George M. Rounds, N. Woodward, who is now assigned to the staff of ComFAR, Quonset Point, R. I.

But it remained for Lt. Rounds' return to Quonset for the thrill of a lifetime. For waiting at the dock to greet him was a three-month-old daughter he had never seen.

The daughter, Penelope, arrived three days after Lt. Rounds left Quonset for combat duty. It was another month before the news reached him.

As the ship approached the dock the air officer smiled his pretty wife, Mary, holding his daughter in her arms. Word passed rapidly and officers and men crowded to the rail to see the homecoming.

His shipmates unanimously approved the infant's family, for as Lt. Rounds embraced his wife and held the infant for their approval a cheer welled up from officers and men on the deck—Quonset Sound.

George returns this week to Quonset from two weeks' special training in amphibious operations at San Diego, Calif.

Cadet Terry Beals Tells Experiences At Training Camp

Writing from Corpus Christi, Texas, in which Cadet Terry Beals relates many interesting bits of news to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Beals, 1345 East Brown. Pressure chamber experience is highly interesting, he says, in the letter which follows.

October 19, 1944.
Thurs. Noon.

Dear Mother and Dad: We've been issued our books and flight gear and stuff. Yesterday we had a physical just like the one I had at M.S.C. and this morning we went on a "30,000 feet" in the pressure chamber. It sure was interesting. They had us take simple tests at "10,000 feet" and then we started "going up" several thousand feet in a minute. I'm not sure if they do it exhaust the air in the chamber—they have altimeters inside and out to tell what with my ground level. I feel that the atmospheric pressure is half that at sea level and at 30,000 feet we were issued oxygen masks of oxygen masks of ill we reached 18,000 feet where we took an "E" test. I got a high score. I had an "E" on my test at that altitude, 115. I scored. To compare that with my ground level score of 175 shows how the lack of oxygen slowed me down. I felt sleepy and was conscious of breathing deeper in an effort to get more O₂. I didn't have the sensation of suffocation or anything—just couldn't concentrate. My vision was impaired also. As soon as we finish the test we put on our masks and the lights seemed to brighten considerably. I started laughing and felt extremely happy. Then we went on our "E" test and took our third test. I scored 225. The pure oxygen I was breathing speeded me up.

At this point they asked one of us to volunteer to take off his mask so the others could watch the effects. The fellow next to me seemed more than willing, so they gave me a pencil and piece of paper and took off his mask. He was told to write his address—it was 1345 East Brown, San Antonio, Tex. I forgot the name! Street, San Antonio, Tex. (at this point he couldn't remember what state he lived in and repeated San Antonio, Tex. several times as far as he got other than some silly marks. He just sat there with a big grin on his face and when asked to write his name again he just sat there. By now his face was purple, or rather blue. They revived him with oxygen and almost immediately he started writing his name over and over. It was funny. Says he couldn't remember very much of what had happened.

It sure was interesting though. At 18,000 feet before we put our masks on, our finger nails had turned blue as well as our lips and ear lobes. That's one of the first indications of lack of oxygen. Whenever he asked Furlong if he wanted oxygen he would answer "no, I feel fine, until finally he began to grin. His complexion was the most' chaste blue. The whole thing was to show us the necessity for oxygen and what would happen to our flying ability without it.

Sunday noon we shove off for Cambasia Field to begin our basic training in Vultees. I can hardly wait. They tell us that on an emergency we throw it in low pitch, kick our flaps down, change gas tanks and start using the wobble pump. At the same time we have to get the nose down and keep the air speed at gliding speed. When Sounds complicated, but they never thought I'd be able to fly a Stearman "with all its instruments."

One of the boys in our room left the key in his closet door this morning so he had to lead a goat, yes a real live goat, all around the yards here for 30 minutes. I've seen other guys leading it around and wondered what on earth they were doing. Sure looked funny. Well, must run to chow now.

Love,
TERRY.

Holah Closing 15 Years As Manager

This is anniversary week for Howard Holah, manager of the Birmingham theatre. He's been manager here for 15 years and is arranging a sort of anniversary party, presenting a special lot of good pictures for the week end.

Added to the feature "Greenwich Village" will be a number of shorts, singles, cartoons, news and other good things. Mr. Holah reports that one of these specials is to be the Thomas Edison film, "The Great Train Robbery" made by Edison in 1903 and with music and sound added.

Other pictures coming along soon include "White Cliffs of Dover," "Going My Way" and "Pin Up Girl."

Friends of the theatre man declare that, while always a leader in community projects, that he has never been busier than during the war years and especially in the interests of the War Loans and the United States War Relocation Authority. His plans for boosting the 6th War Loan call for an even heavier effort than that of the 5th War Loan.

Friends are extending congratulations on his successful fifteen years as manager of the Birmingham theatre.

Dr. John P. Wood, of Birmingham, president-elect of the American Osteopathic Association, will serve on a committee of the Michigan Association of Osteopathic Physicians and Surgeons, sponsoring organization of the Ida Hubbard Fund, and to provide Beaver Edwards plastic hands, arms, ears and other body members for veterans in need of them, association officials announced today, following its war service conference and eight annual meeting in Detroit.

A committee on post-war readjustment has been appointed to prepare and administer the program.

Dr. Wood announced that a $1,075,000 expansion program is already under way to provide greater educational facilities for osteopathic colleges.

All Fall Plowing Requests Must Be In By November 8

"Those who want fall plowing will have to make application at the Victory Garden desk before the deadline Wednesday, Nov. 8," is the announcement made by Mrs. Charles D. McCall, chairman of the committee Wednesday.

"All of those who registered or fall plowing in preceding years have been contacted by telephone," said Mrs. McCall. "We are waiting for those who want fall plowing on borrowed land to come and sign up for use of the land," she continued. "There are others who want to change to plots nearer home or for some other reason. They should make application at once so new plots can be assigned to them."

Attending the meeting Wednesday were Mrs. John F. Cole and Mrs. Lewis C. Keenan, who with Mrs. Paul T. Smith and Mrs. Charles D. McCall, chairman, have carried on the work of contacting gardeners. John W. Gaffill, chairman of the program, complimented the staff on their splendid cooperation.

A majority of those who had gardens this year are planning to continue them next year," said the chairman. "And we want to work toward small permanent gardens in every home with permanent berry patches, fruit trees, amaranths, etc. After we have produced food for victory we can turn to a more leisurely gardening. Those who want help in planning their gardens next year are asked to call garden specialist Howard N. Chapel, 812 Ridgecreek, 447."
