WAR FRONT SUPPLY LINES START ON GMC ASSEMBLY LINES

The big, powerful GMC "six-by-six," the Army's basic transport truck, is responsible for moving a great share of the supplies from beachheads to battle lines, as shown in this news photo from Normandy. Today, the Army needs more GMCs, not only replacements for the tough fighting in Europe, but also for the great battles which are taking place in the Pacific. America is winning the war, but the job is far from finished. The same is true at GMC Truck & Coach. It has produced more than 400,000 military vehicles-more than any other manufacturer-but it must produce thousands more, quickly. Apply for a GMC war job today, and help supply the Allied Forces with the trucks that are serving the supply lines on every fighting front.
