Compromise The people of the United States, in considering the settlement that must follow victory in Europe, should never lose sight of the fact that the war is being fought, not alone by the United States, but by our valiant allies, the British and the Russian people.

and the Russian people.

Naturally, when the time comes to write the terms of the settlement, the British and the Russians will expect to have a voice in the arrangements made. It is not intelligent for the people of this country to expect that both allied nations will automatically agree with every suggestion that emanates from Congress, the White Hoise, or the pressure groups that promote foreign interests in the United States.

It may be that the people of this country may not like some of the idea advanced by our Affes. The game can be said white vertainty of the reaction that British and Russian tritiens will, have to our thoughts. Consequently, if the three nations are to get along in peace, as well as in war, there must be compromise. It is essential for us, in the Linted States, to be willing to make reasonable concessions in the interest of unanimity.

Land For that the government Service Men plus had been government. Service Men plus had beddings to sepice niert where they come home from the way and some Americans seem to have the idea that this will just about solve the problem of locating our solders, and sailors.

There is faittle lope for the presentation of opportunity to service men through the grant of free land. Already the problem of agriculture is the disposition of surpluses and government assistance is necessary, to prevent disactrous prices for farm products.

Lawould be no favor to a brave soldier or sailors to give him a farm and let him produce crops that are already economic problems. He would have no very encouraging outlook and his economic battle would be letrific.

The astronomers tell as that there are three stars in the galactic system which are more luminous than the sun. They include the Dog Star. Strius, the Little Dog Star. Procyon, and the star Altair.

Strius, thirty times brighter than the sun, is eight light years away from the earth, procyon eleven light years, and Altair sixten light years. A light year, as the reader knows, is the distance light will travel in a year at the rate of 180,000 miles per second.
