New Recreational Reading Being Provided At Baldwin Public Library; Jolly List of Books Are Listed for Enjoyment of Public

By LINDO MOORE
husband as much as we might have been led to believe.

The "Babbling Woman" by Kenneth Horan. Author deftly handles the story of the rise of a mystery gem through a woman's resourcefulness and vision.

"Being Met Together" by Vaughn Wilkins. Colorful story of a pitch eye whose hatred of the English led her to fear her son for his own revenge, which meant aiding Napoleon's plan to invade England.

"Dead Man's Foot" by Amber Dean. Strange and mysterious death of beautiful golden-haired one that nobody liked anyway.

"House That Hate Built" by Sara Mason. Spooky thriller with Southern gothic background.

"Death in the End" by Agatha Christie. No cops, no photographers, no finest-hint men are found in this yarn laid in ancient Egypt but they get their man in the end.

"The Road Is Before Us" by Agnes Boulton. Unusual technique presents this tense story of five people in a car driving south from Pittsburgh to St. Petersburg.

"Mother Went Mad on Monday" by Ethel Huston. Deliciously frothy tale of a much put-upon mother's revolt.

"These Are the Times" by Clara Jaynes. Story of a wayward woman who almost wrecked her husband's medical career.

"We Ride a White Donkey" by George Panetta. Hilarious yarn about an incredible family who lived on Mulberry street, New York City, whose material assets consisted of one refractory white donkey.

"Lost in the Horse Latitudes" by H. Allop Smith. More shenanigans—this time in Hollywood from the author of "Low Man on a Totem Pole."

"The Glittering Hill" by Clyde Murphy. Lusty but written in Montana of the '60s, when men were men. Lots of shootin' but good historical backdrop for the whole thing.

"Young Mrs. Brand" by Robert Hichens. Delicately written story which shaped her life.

"High Time" by Mary Lasswell. The beloved but impossible ladies of "Suds in Your Eye" are back again for more high jinks.

"Blaze Away" by Lillian Ross. Blaz's parents were introduced to the world in "The Stranger." According to this story, Mamma and daddy really reform her hill billy

Twenty-seven Gift Boxes Are Packed By The Legion Auxiliary

Several members of the local American Legion Auxiliary not only burned the midnight oil last Thursday evening but also kept the cook-stove oven hot baking cookies until the wee small hours in the morning.

Twenty-seven overseas boxes were packed and made ready for mailing to the sons and daughters of members of the American Legion and Auxiliary. Each box was filled with two dozen home made cookies, candy bars, gum, cigarettes, playing cards, tooth brushes, tooth paste and shaving cream.

This busy evening took place at the home of the Auxiliary's president, Mrs. Arthur Mason, 956 Chester street. Early next month about thirty-five more boxes will be packed with the same articles for the boys and girls who are in the service and stationed in the United States.

GAWS President
Newest alphabetical wrinkle is the GAWS (Grandmothers of America in War Service). Mrs. Viola Wendt, 55 Ave. Detroit, Mich., war worker, is president. Bookings war production is the grandmothers' purpose. There are 53 members.

Throughout the centuries . . . through days of peace, through trying times of war, and days of peace again, Christmas has stood firm, an enduring symbol of those ideals toward which mankind struggles.

And now in 1944, as the tides turn again, who can deny that Christmas should be as nearly like the Christmases of other years as times permit, for certain it is that around the Spirit of Christmas the bright new world will be built.

But again this year Christmas calls for planning. Shortages, delivery restrictions and delays are still with us. Preparations, if they are to be as enjoyable as they should be, must be made over a longer period of time.

To help you with your shopping under these uncertain conditions, we are ready early with stocks in substantial quantities and varieties. May we urge you to start now . . . to buy quality, endurable gifts. Buy only what you need and buy early. And buy those best of all gifts, War Bonds . . . and we'll keep our Christmas merry still.

JUST WHAT Are VITAMINS?

- Vitamins are chemical substances occurring naturally in foods and necessary every moment of life to maintain a normal process related to the general protection of health. They affect nutrition by regulating the utilization of nutritive materials. Under today's diets, heavy with carbohydrates, a person may eat his fill of food and yet be "starving" for vitamins—a "starvation" that makes itself known in a variety of symptoms. This is why people find that they feel better when they supplement their diet with vitamin concentrates.
