Local Soldier Is Member of Crack Infantry Regiment

Lieut. Robert P. Ellis, 27375 Northeast Highway, platoon leader, is serving with the 351st Regiment in Italy, one of General Mark Clark's Fifth Army units that helped to drive the Germans from the Gargano River to the Arno. Except for a brief rest period, the regiment marched and fought almost continuously for more than five months.

Part of the 88th Infantry Division, the first selective service infantry division to come overseas in World War II, the 351st was the first element of that division to enter combat. After two months of aggressive patrolling in the Mignano sector, the regiment participated in the smashing Fifth Army drive beginning May 11. Three days later the regiment stormed into Santa Maria Infante, the key enemy bastion. Over rugged mountains and across broad valleys, the 351st pushed forward and helped to liberate Rome.

Soon after the city's fall, the regiment was given a well-earned rest. Three weeks later, however, the division 351st was again sloughing enemy lines and backing the defeated Germans to the north. At times the infantrymen had to move rapidly to keep up with the fleeing enemy. In other instances important points were captured only after bitter house-to-house fighting.

In addition to being the division's first regiment to enter combat, the 351st was its first regiment to arrive overseas, first to arrive in Italy, first to earn a Distinguished Service Cross, and first to receive a battlefield promotion
