Man's One of man's worst enemies are the insects. Insects are the most numerous and versatile group in the animal kingdom and can be found practically anywhere on earth where life exists.

iound practically anywhere on earth where life exists.

They can live in water, on land, above the ground or under the ground. They can feed on all parts of a plant above the surface or attack the roots of a plant below the ground. They can find lodging in the heart of the largest of trees or between the surfaces of a leaf or within a tiny leaf stalk.

Every housekeeper knows the scourge of certain insects. Roaches can make life miserable for the woman of the house, while mothy may destroy the most valuable clothing in the wardrohe, if proper precautions are not taken.

The farmer sustains an avyrage annual loss of not less than ten per cent of the value of his crops if he takes no measures to control or check the ravages of these insert pests. Weevils, worms, grassloppers and the like take their annual toll of the profits of the farm.

Saving In discussing the fruits of LendAmerican Lives Lease, Secretary of LendLouse Secretary of Lend States has equipped/or "supported in varying degree of completeness" 1,760,000 troops of the Allied athies.

Mr Stimson points out that the country has long this "with an expenditure of only sixteen per cent of our total munitions production." The figure seems to indicate that without Lend-Louse, there would be several unlion fewer troops in the Allied now engaged in the decisive phase of the struggle against Germany.

If this were the case, the United States would have to form larger armies if the Axis is to be overthrown.

Officers From The Battlefront at the rate of 1,000 per month in a streamined, twelse-weeks course, with the first class-slated for graduation in May.

The young officers will be used as platoon leaders. Presumably, the school will offer opportunitie to men who have seen combat and deserve the training that will enable them to wear bars.

/Most Americans will appland the decision of the Army to train capable soldiers, with battle experience, for officers rather than to depend on a system of training new recruits at home. Certainly, men who have faced the enemy under modern battle conditions deserve every recognition that the Army can give to them.

institution of higher learning in another state where it is revealed that one of the players, "expelled" in connection with alleged hrithes, has never been a student at the follege, never attended a class, and only carried books occasionally.

It is difficult to connective that such a state of affairs existed without the knowledge and participation of some of the faculty and administrative officers of the institution. Apparently, there was a demand for a winning team as an "advertisement" of the college and the quality of the basketiball team was more important than the functions of the college.

We are aware of the importance that friends and alumin of various institutions of higher learning place upon a winning football, baskethall or hasheall team, and that the pressure of a the group has led many institutions to undermine the fundamental concept of an educational process. It is time that the abuses be corrected everwwhere.

"Waste" of War waste of War The Army began the construction for a lung shipping base in July, 1912, to handle war supplies support an Aleutian campaign. The base was completed in the summer of 1913, but, by that limit, the Japanese invaders bad been omisted from the Meutians store to conclude at this time that the Army should not have constructed the base. Our judgement, however, must be based on conditions as they existed in 1912, when the enemy had vantage joints in the Meutians and nobody knew whether the Japanese would attempt a major offensive into Alaska.

TO EXPECT ROOSTVECT, OUT BEHILD, AND STALIS to agree upon every post-war problem is like expecting any average three people to do likewise. Human nature cannot stand such terrific adjustments
