the time for the conference. The City Planning Commission was asked to attend the same session. In discussing the proposal, Commissioner Wilmer E. Moody declared he was looking ahead to an interesting and profitable evening inasmuch as he has thus far been unable to attend the general planning meetings.

Milton T. Mallender urged that Birmingham take action on some suggested improvements until a decision has been reached on the general over-all plan. "I think it only fair that Birmingham wait on her own plans until some decision is reached on the proposed general plan for the entire country," he said.

The proposal for a new street along the east side of Hunter boulevard was for further study but no action is expected to be taken until after the proposals for a broad over-all plan is decided on.

Mrs. Cleveland Walcutt, president of the Community Council, was unable to be present because of illness, but the group adopted a resolution expressing appreciation of her excellent work in planning and organizing the nature and regret that she was not able to be present. In her absence, Mrs. J. H. Quinn, president of the Community Council, served as institute director, assisted by members of the executive board of the Community Council.

Dr. Malcolm Dana Of Olivet Speaks To Lions Club

Dr. Malcolm Dana, president of Olivet College since the beginning of the fall term, and for the previous five years president of Piedmont College in Georgia, was the speaker at the Lions luncheon Wednesday, February 15, at the club at Birmingham. Dr. Dana was introduced by Dr. Kendall Carter, Olivet's director of public relations.

Dr. Dana, 47, is a native of Iowa. He is a member of the club at this meeting and introduced Dr. Dana who read as his topic, "Education for Today." He began by saying that there are two theories of education to which he is very much opposed. One is termed the regular education and all the honors that go with it. Still, the student may know nothing of the practical application of the knowledge which he has acquired.

The other objectionable theory, according to Dr. Dana, is the social theory which creates false principles and breeds hatred. He claims the chaotic condition of the world today is the result of this. Love, as it is successful in finding people into families, organizations and even communities, he said, must be taught and fostered on a world-wide scale. Several theories in American colleges run against the grain of tolerance and understanding.

Dr. Dana states that functional organization is needed in the classroom and says that steady application under guidance will prepare students to meet the challenge of today's world. "In as much as it is possible the college curriculum should be tailored to fit the needs of each individual student," he said.

He stated that if church-related colleges, such as Olivet, do not have a clear-cut policy on religious practices, the day will come when they will be regarded as Old Man Grouphouse was going to have a party on Friday, Feb. 2, but feels sure the butterfly really believes in an early spring.

IS ON HOCKEY TEAM Richard Mixer, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Mixer, 678 Poppleton, is now the regular goalie on the University of Michigan hockey team. The Cranbrook school team member appears to be making good in the position at the nets for Michigan where he is a junior engineering student.

Edgar Baegen, Major James Stewart and Lita Costello were Boy Scouts.

Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Schenk, 711 Bennaville, died Friday at her residence following a long illness. She was the wife of Saul S. Schenk, Nov. 16, 1887, and came to Birmingham in 1922.

She was survived by her husband, John, a son, Lieut. Dale Bergman, U. S. N., and a brother of Alameda, Calif. Service will be Monday at 2 p. m. at Bell funeral home with burial in White Chapel cemetery.

James H. Gardiner James H. Gardiner, father of C. H. Gardiner, 607 Hawthorne, died Tuesday at his home in Smith Falls, Ont. Besides his son, he is survived by a grandson, Lieut. Charles Gardiner, U. S. N., and a great-grandson, Charles, Jr., of Birmingham.

CRAVEN HOME BURGLARIZED The George R. Craven home at 2388 Fairway drive was burglarized Sunday while the family members were away from home. Mrs. Craven returned home at about 8 o'clock Sunday evening and no trace of her jewelry was found. She hurriedly notified police but the car was gone when she returned. Police officers George Stephenson and Truman Kilbourn responded and a survey of the home was made, revealing a number of items were missing. Included in the list were two watches, two radios, clothing, a vacuum cleaner and a large dictionary. It is said the loss is covered by insurance.

The sport of fox hunting is nearly as old as civilization. Early drawings in ancient tombs and caves depict "the chase" although it is not known definitely that foxes were the quarry. It has been determined, however, that during the middle ages hunters indulged in fox chasing.

Proclamation

Mayor Ray A. Palmer has issued the following proclamation in connection with the Russian Relief campaign: Whereas, American observers in Russia have reported more than 60 million civilian survivors and refugees of liberated territories, who have found safety on Soviet soil, are urgently in need of warm clothing and shoes in order to help them live through this critical winter; And whereas in response to this need the Russian War Relief Committee, with the Russian War Relief Council, Inc., registered with the President's War Relief Control Board, I do hereby proclaim the period of Feb. 4 to Feb. 11 as "Clothing for the People of Russia Week" in Birmingham and urge all people to deliver to authorized reliable garments and shoes that they can spare in order to help save lives of those who have suffered so much in our common cause.

RAY A. PALMER, Mayor.

Rifle Club Opens Training Course

The new class in the pre-induction rifle training course started Monday evening, Jan. 20, with 10 new members. The class includes three girls and seven boys, according to officers of the Birmingham Rifle Club. The classes are held at 8 o'clock Monday evenings for a six weeks period.

VETERAN

such mental symptoms. The threshold for some is much higher than for others. Emotional strain, physical illness, fatigue, inadequate food, poor morale definitely lowers the threshold for mental breakdown. It must be remembered that there are many types of mental illness, personality makeup, what may cause an illness in one will not in another.

Common Factors "Fundamentally, there are a series of factors common to all types of mental illness. These factors are adjustment in life and may determine whether we develop an emotional or personality illness or not. Some of these factors are intelligence, temperament, habits, cultural makeup, mind-body relationship and our emotional maturity. Induction into the service requires a person to make an adjustment to the loss of accustomed habits of living and to a different state of affairs. The adjustment of personal relationships are changed. There is a loss of individuality of a person to a certain degree of freedom. He becomes a member of a group whose individual will is subordinate to the will of the unit and he must learn to accept this as the normal state of affairs.

"A number of neuropsychiatric conditions which may develop in individuals are: (1) Psychosis commonly known as insanity. The word 'insane' should not be used—it is purely a medical term. Such a condition is malignant neuropsychiatric condition, comparable to the more serious types of physical disease. Many of these cases do respond to treatment to a certain degree. (2) Convulsive disorder or epilepsy. (3) Psychopathic personality. This type of individual is one who lacks moral and ethical judgment and do not learn by unpleasant experience. They may be very intelligent and may have a charming outward personality. Such a person is a danger to his friends easily, but uses his friends to gain his own ends. (4) The so-called psychosomatic conditions which are made up of such conditions as stomach ulcers, gastritis, etc. These conditions are not organic in nature. (5) Psychoneurosis, these make up most of the NP cases either in service or out of service and there are a number of different types of this kind of condition.

"Excellent and important procedures are being used in the service to prevent the development of such sickness and exceptionally well supervised treatment is being given individual soldiers to develop conditions of this sort. In spite of this a very large percentage of the men discharged from service are discharged because of neuropsychiatric reasons, to date approximately forty per cent of the men discharged from service are discharged because of neuropsychiatric reasons. Many of these persons, however, refuse to accept psychiatric help, the reason in part being ignorance and emotional bias in the community toward psychiatric illness and its treatment, and in part prejudice on the part of the individual. He is willing to accept treatment for a physical condition, but tends to feel that a mental illness is something which he should be able to control not realizing that he may need help just as the person with appendicitis needs medical help. Mental illness should not be considered something to be ashamed of.

"At the present time many agencies in various communities are offering services to the returning servicemen whether he be neuro-psychiatric or NP or whether he may have been discharged for some other reason. It would be well if all of these services could be coordinated and under uniform supervision. Oftentimes too much friendly advice, too much sympathy, not tinged with a sufficient degree of understanding makes readjustment in the community more difficult. It may actually tend to lengthen or make permanent the veteran's disability. Each veteran who returns presents an individual problem depending upon his particular type of emotional and personality makeup. One may wish to discuss at length the disagreeable experiences which he has had, another may be very sensitive when questioned concerning his activities and his experiences.

Much Understand Needs "Those of us who are in the community should recognize these differences, offer help whenever it appears actually indicated and try to understand the veteran's need for a gradual reduction of his tension and 'jitters'. In other words, to let him 'wind down'. Under no circumstances should anyone ever tease or 'kid' those veterans or for that matter anyone else for his emotional or personality peculiarities since this only tends to increase his anxiety and tension. The readjustment to civilian life is oftentimes difficult, occasionally even more difficult than the adjustment from civilian life to military service. We as members of the community should try to understand the problem and to cooperate wholeheartedly in this readjustment.

New Type Money Order Is To Go On Sale Today At Birmingham Post Office

Postal notes—a new and simplified type of money order—were placed on sale today at the Birmingham post office and at most other local post offices and substantially throughout the country. Postmaster Joseph A. Byrne reported.

The will be good for amounts ranging from one cent to $10. The charge is a nickel, no matter what the amount. No application need be filed out.

Here is how a person can send any amount of cash. For example, he can send $2.75 to Uncle Ed and Aunt Emma:

Just step to any money order window and tell the clerk the amount you want to send. The clerk will take a $2 note and paste two stamps on it—each for one cent and the other for three cents.

You pay for it and leave. Then at a desk where you want help, tell the clerk you will fill in the name of Uncle Ed or Aunt Emma and the address, detach the receipt and mail the note in any envelope. The nickel fee is a considerable saving over the old type money order which costs as much as 15 cents for a $10 transfer.

The note is a pre-punched calculating card form.

Van Dyke Comes For Friday Game

The Van Dyke high school basketball quintet will invade the Birmingham gym Friday night for their second game with the Maples. Van Dyke won their first game 33-23 but the locals plan a much stiffer defense and a much faster attack.

Van Dyke lost two men by mid-year graduation, Campbell, center, and Oden, another regular. Birmingham was fortunate not to lose any men in mid-year.

Each team has won two games and dropped five.

Lt. Robert Wooley Is Home From Overseas

Lt. Robert Wooley, navigator on a B-24 on 62 major missions over enemy territory on the European front, arrived home Sunday night on a leave of several weeks, and is with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Al Wooley, 1042 Plym Street.

The youthful Alvin has the Distinguished Flying Cross, presented to him on his 22nd birthday anniversary, Dec. 22, 1944, from the Prominent Citation and two Oak Leaf Clusters.

Plans to return to combat duty but says he has no idea where he will be sent this time.

OVERCOME BY FUMES Lee Weathersby, 1335 Ruffner, an employee of the Birmingham department of public works, received medical treatment by the fire department Sunday after being overcome by carbon monoxide fumes while working in his garage. He had his car running and the doors to the garage closed to keep out the cold. Feeling himself overcome by the fumes he crawled outside where he was found by Mrs. Weathersby, his neighbor. He was found on the job at the D. W. Monday.
