Rock-a-Bye Destroyer, in the Dry Dock

Floating dry docks are one reason the Navy gets warships back in fighting trim so soon after battle damage. At top is one of the big contraptions all ready to go to sea. It can scoop a destroyer right out of the water by dropping the end gate, right. Then it pumps the dry, cradling the destroyer for repairs. Lower, the floating dry dock's innards. The Navy has been using these since 1942, making repairs practically on the scene of action. (Navy photos.)

What Navy Personnel Wants Most Of All Is Letters And Pictures From Home; Books, Watches, Pens, Lighters

Birmingham families of members of the Naval personnel for a long time have been wondering just what their boys and girls in the Navy, Marines, Coast Guards, Waves and Spars really like best as gifts from home. Now word out of Washington that answers the question of "What Shall I send my boy or girl?"

The Navy says that extensive surveys have shown that Navy personnel overseas above all want letters - letters giving local news and telling of things done and things planned. Secondly, they want objects with a personal, sentimental appeal such as photographs, snapshots, drawings made by their youngsters, and trophies or clipartings that can be enclosed in these letters.

An extensive survey has been taken of what sailors, Marines, and Coast Guardsmen serving in forward areas want in their gift packages. Reports have also come in on the type of gifts Waves, Spars and Marines serving overseas prefer to receive from home.

These surveys have shown that they mostly know what they don't want. Foremost among the "Don'ts" are candy, soft candies, cookies, cigarettes and fancy toilet kits. Foods such as candies and cakes that may have been their favorites when they were home are a battered mass of crumbs or moldy chocolate when they arrive.

Following are lists of overseas "Do's":

- For men - pictures, earned pay, Navy pay envelopes, pens, watches, lighters, books, writing cases or portfolios, service watches, pens, engraved identification tags, waterproof wallets, cigarette lighters.
- For women - pictures, books, play clothes, lingerie, stockings, gloves. Mail the gift they tell you they want.
- On ships and at shore stations there are spaces which are well stocked with items such as soap, shaving cream, shaving kit, soap in this hair cream shampoo, hair cream, toothbrush, toothpaste, gum, lipstick, combs, and other personal items that can be mailed and cheaply obtained upon the next return.
- The limited space in a letter is a storage of clothes and toiletries. Don't put bottles, heavy perfume, items being sent upon a Red Cross down with things you'll have to discard. The most thing to do is ask them that they want.

Street lights protect the movement of workers, troops, and war supplies.

The darkness under a broken light may trap a fellow American in a costly accident.

Repairing a broken light uses up precious war materials needed at the front.
