INTERPRETING THE NEWS

By GENE ALLEMAN

Return of war veterans to Michigan civilian life is already prompting speculation about Michigan's 1946 state campaign.

Gov. Governor Vernon J. Brown is the favorite for Republican nomination for the governorship. Friends of Secretary of State Herman Blinn insist that Blinn will run for re-nomination.

Among the persons mentioned for lieutenant governor on the G.O.P. ticket are, in alphabetical order: State Senator George Higgins, Perendale; State Senator Ivan Johnson, Mt. Clemens; Dr. Eugene R. Keyes, Dearborn; former Governor; State Senator James Milken, Traverse City; Howard Nugent, Red Ass, speaker of the house of representatives; Tom Read, Shelby, former lieutenant governor; and State Senator Don Vander Vorpe, chairman of the senate finance committee.

Should the Republicans make straight bill for veterans' votes by including a veteran of World War II somewhere on the ticket? Some observers feel that the Kelly administration with its fifty million dollars and for veterans and the Office of Veteran Affairs, headed by Col. Philip Pack, has already a strong record of veteran service and that no ticket recognition is necessary.

Widespread unemployment in Michigan, one year from today, would have an adverse effect on the chances for Republican victory in November. Possibility of a Democratic comeback at Lansing is in the 1946 picture. Restless voters usually cast their ballots as usual.

One reason why Michigan political tides changed frequently during the industrial upset. This was the rise and fall of employment in larger cities such as Detroit, Pontiac and Flint. There were enough independent voters to swing the election when they were aroused sufficiently to go to the polls.

Consider then the prospect of employment following reconstruction. According to the Committee for Economic Development, total national employment should be 24 per cent higher than in 1940 and only 13 per cent lower than the peak of wartime production.

Gunfire Marks The Opening Today of Waterfowl Season

Scattering gunfire over the length and breadth of Michigan opened the 1946 migratory waterfowl season today; heavier activity will be unleashed when first flights of northern ducks arrive.

Birmingham sportsmen have been chary about forecasting the kind of season that is in prospect. Lasting season of local ducks was good and there should be fairly satisfactory early season shooting, but how good the later weeks will be is problematical.

The 1946 season was disappointing at least in Michigan. Logging between two flyways—the Atlantic and the Mississippi—Michigan did not attract greatly increased numbers of waterfowl.

Game men have a theory that, when seasons are dry in western states, more ducks and geese fly south through Michigan. Last season was wetter than usual over much of the United States; a like condition exists this year.

Consequently many southward-flying flocks may not come near Michigan's great expanses of water.

Sportsmen complained also last season that ducks rafted too far from shore to afford shooting.

Wildfowling in southeastern Michigan got a break this season—the famous Pointe M or 111.6 marshes southeast of Birmingham on Lake Erie are opened to public hunting for the first time in 70-odd years.

Purchased by the state this year, the marshes are added to other famous duck-shooting areas similarly administered for the public's benefit—Muskegon in the upper peninsula, miles of frontage on Saginaw Bay, and the St. Clair River.

Dealers express slight hope that the ammunition shortage will be appreciably eased during the current season which ends December 31.

Last count of Michigan wildfowling totaled $3,564, those who purchased the $1 federal duck stamp. This stamp and a Michigan small game license must be secured by all duck hunters.

We presume other regional associations are going to make similar drives for advertising pledges.
