Luncheon Kidding Results in the Sale of Restaurant Business

Birmingham folks who have heard this story say it's one for the books. They say it is not often that a bit of ribbing or kidding results in the sale of a restaurant business, or any other business, right on the spot.

But that is just what happened the other day at Carson's Cafe, West Maple and Telegraph roads, when Thomas H. Meyers and Max L. Tomlinson of Detroit, kidded the waitress about the service and the food.

As sometimes happens, one word led to another, and soon the proprietor and guests were visiting in real businesslike fashion. The restaurateur mentioned that he would like to sell his business, having become tired and a bit discouraged at times over the matter of help and food. The guests, already operating two restaurants in Detroit, thought they might be interested. The sales price was mentioned; so was the purchase price. Soon the parties had agreed and right there at the lunch table the sales agreement was made out and signed, and down payment made. The 10 owner's cash removed from the cash register; a new supply of chairs placed, and the new owners had charged their lunch to their new business.

The name of the place has been changed to "Pinewood No. 3" and its slogan, like that of the two restaurants owned in Detroit, will be "This is it!"

Mr. Tower is in charge of the new place for the present.

For Insurance Men
A man bought several hundred very expensive cigars and had them insured against fire. After he had smoked them all, he put in a claim that they had been destroyed by fire.

The insurance company refused to pay the claim and the man sued. The judge decided that since the company agreed to insure the cigars against fire and had given the man a policy, it was financially responsible.

As soon as the claim had been paid, the insurance company had the man arrested on a charge of arson.
