

Mrs. Ward Thrilled By Voice of Daughter Calling From London

Probably Birmingham's most thrilled woman Tuesday was Mrs. Thomas J. Ward, 619 Frank street, who answered the telephone and heard coming in over the wire the voice of her daughter, Lt. Wilma K. Ward, of the Army Nurses Corps, who was calling from London, England. "It sounded as though she was calling from no farther away than the Eccentric Office," declared Mrs. Ward in a burst of feeling of the extremely pleasant incident.

Lieutenant Ward, in London from her base in Paris, found the wires carrying her voice perfectly. She has been overseas two years and at present is with the 36th General Hospital Group. She told her mother that while in England she had visited in Birmingham and London and while in the latter city had enjoyed a long visit with Col. Robert Goetz of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Goetz, 635 Frank street, her next door neighbor here, in Birmingham. Before leaving Paris, on her leave she visited with Sgt. James Peabody, son of Mrs. Stanley Peabody of Quenton road, now stationed in Paris.

Tank Carries Its Own Bridge

Secrecy is lifted from another strange weapon, the British scissors tank, which performed feats in the Normandy invasion unknown in previous warfare. The scissors tank carries its own bridge, a pair of ramps tank-truck being lowered over a gap in the trench. It raises and lowers the bridge hydraulically over ditches, craters, and the like. Strictly Fresh

INCLUDED in Japan's surrender politics is abolition of the "thought-control" police, whose job it was to make the people think they were winning. The emperor probably decided that even the detested Japanese would never believe all those strangers were prisoners.

Japan's surrender, coming as it did when the lusty Russians were ripping through Manchuria and Korea, seems to parallel the German surrender. Apparently the Japs, too, feel that the Russians are the bitter of two evils.

Now that occupation operations are under way in Japan, America will once more settle down to giving the World Series the serious attention to which it is accustomed.

There is at least one silver lining in the dark cloud of war layoff; a man can now hold hands with a young lady without encountering callouses.

Congressman Knutson of Minnesota, advocates reducing income taxes 20 per cent and repealing the excess profits tax. Greater bid for popularity than no other Republican issue.
