Playground Has Circus-Look Out, Barnum & Bailey

Led by a drum major dressed in brilliant red with golden tassels swinging from his hat, the Adams playground circus parade moved grandly around the ring Friday morning before an audience of well over a hundred people.

There were elephants, a n a k e d clowns, cowboys, a fat woman, lions, clowns, a fortune teller, a butterfly, a photographer, and "a Devil!"

The children laughed and skipped before the judges and had a thoroughly wonderful time—the two little boys as the anterior and posterior of a horse who couldn't see where they were going and kept wandering off in the wrong direction.

Those who took part in the parade were Mary Lou Hayden, Jilly Katten, Tommy Bell, Michael Weston, David Parnie, Molly Ann Martin, Jean Masterton, Marty Harrison, Pixie and Bobby Yinging, and Russ Porteous.

Others were Tommy, Dickie, and Carol Viers, Nancy Middleworth, Robert Dugler, Davis Masterton, Hans Matthias, Ann and Ran Hammer, Tim Usher, and Jean Fritz.

Ronnie Porteous helped Paul Carter in selling soft drinks and Carol Porteous assisted Jane Eastman, playground director.

The judges, Mrs. Arnold Campbell, Mrs. William Shaska, and Mrs. William Jackson, after giving the matter much consideration, voted Russ Porteous, the drum-major boy, the prize for the cutest costume. David Parnie, as the snake charmer, received a prize as runner-up. The most original costumes were those of Pixie Yinging and Ran Hammer as the lion, and Dickie Viers and Hans Matthias as the eve-straying horse.

Prize for the most complete costume went to Ann Hammer, the photographer. Joanie Wagner was the parade's smallest entry and Jean Masterton as the buckom fat lady received the prize for the most unusual costume.

Consolation prizes went to the "Devil," alias Tommy Bell, Bill Rutten as the clown, and Judy Friezing as the elephant.

After the prizes had been awarded, the different playgrounds presented acts in the middle of the circus ring. Five little cowboys from the Adams playground gave an enthusiastic
