The Last Dragon

Lady Junco once asked... He replied: "They turn back. They may have killed the dragon at the first bridge, and even at the third, but few will meet the monster at the end." He who vanquishes the demon at the last bridge has won forever.

Sir William Wallace, the Scot National Hero, was outlawed for killing an English man. Immortal times he tried to run the English out of Scotland. One morning as he lay in a low shed, his attention became centered on a spider weaving a web.

The French, under Ferdinand de Lesseps, made several brilliant beginnings at a canal across the Isthmus of Panama.

Most preventable failures are caused by man's fear of the dragon at the last bridge... man's fear of his own shortcomings.

Canning Machinery

Vegetables, fruits and meats have been "canned" by the people of this country for many years, but a new project contemplates the "canning" in aluminum of valuable war surplus materials.

By means of the process, guns and all sorts of manufactured articles and materials can be stored in the open years, without rusting, corroding or deteriorating.

WORK, THE NECESSITY TO BE ENGAGED IN SOME occupation, is one of the most valuable and beneficial devices ever given to mankind.
